Mr. Rockefeller's Change.
Roaring Gently.
Skeleton at Dinner.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, Jr., has never in his life drunk anything containing alcohol; the same is true of his father and his grandfather. Distinguished gentlemen that occasionally dine with either Rockefeller can testify that orange juice, mixed with water, and other fruit juices flow like wine at the festive board. But wine does not flow.

Mr. Rockefeller and his father believed, as formerly did many other sincere men, that prohibition would stop drunkenness and prevent the use of whisky. And they generously gave hundreds of thousands to the temperance cause.

THEY DISCOVER, after an experiment of many years, that prohibition is an absolute failure, that instead of stopping the use of whisky, it has increased that use, introducing viler kinds of whisky, while creating, through bootlegging and associated lawlessness, such a crime wave as no civilized country had ever seen.

UNLIKE SOME others, earnest in their advocacy of prohibition, Mr. Rockefeller and his father do not refuse to admit the facts, or to admit that their hopes are disappointed.

On behalf of himself and his father, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., urges repeal of prohibition upon both political parties, recommending the suggestion made by Dr. Butler, of Columbia University.

This declaration by the Rockefellers, father and son, proves their moral courage, for it is not pleasant to admit a mistake, and it may prove a decisive factor in a matter most important to the welfare of the United States.

CARLOS DAVILA, provisional president of Chile, representing the Socialist-Communist, latest successful uprising, says Chile probably will recognize Soviet Russia, but will not establish a South American imitation of that government.

You remember that in Midsummer Night's Dream, the gentleman who was to play the part of the lion said that, if desired, he could roar as gently as any sucking dove.

Perhaps this South American bolshevism will develop the same mild quality. President Davila guarantees that bank accounts and cash belonging to foreigners will not be "expropriated."

THE UNIVERSITY of London gave a dinner in honor of Jeremy Bentham, who worked for humanity, and a strange wish of the great Bentham was carried out, namely that "my skeleton be put together in such a manner that the whole figure may be seated in the chair usually occupied by me, when living, in the attitude in which I was sitting when engaged in thought."

At the dinner in his honor, Bentham's skeleton, dressed in clothes that he wore one hundred years ago, with an artificial head, representing his features, as in real life, to avoid the gruesome effect of the skull, sat with the guests at dinner.

TO SOME of us that seems a strange idea. But others, that share man's intense hatred of being wiped out and forgotten, can understand how old Bentham felt.

Anything, however little, is better than oblivion. It probably comforts Gautama to know that a tooth supposed to have been his, is carried every year in pious procession on the back of an elephant, and it pleased Mohammed to know that millions of his followers would rather own one hair from his head than a 50 carat diamond.

Arrested

C. B. COWAN

Commander Cowan, leader of the police-styled Communistic Workers' Ex-Service Men's League contingent of the bonus army, arrested in the camp near Irwin, returned to Pittsburgh. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Pacifists Arrested At Pitt

Excitement, argument and the police ousted any possible dullness and monotony from Pitt's commencement exercises today.

Two pacifist students and a former student tried to hold a protest demonstration against Gen. Douglas McArthur, chief of staff of the United States Army, as principal speaker. They were arrested.

Gen. MacArthur then mounted the rostrum and in a strong speech, which argued for preparedness and criticised Pacifists, cited the possibility of another world war.

LARGEST CLASS

It was not only the first outdoor commencement program at the university, but also the largest 1,362 students being given degrees. Ceremonies were held in the Stadium.

More than 10,000 parents and friends of the graduates were moving toward the Stadium when Oakland police strode into the Activities Building on the campus, loaded the three protesting students into the patrol and detained them at Oakland Police Station.

While they were being held, Gen. MacArthur was making these assertions in the Stadium:

"Pacifism and its bedfellow, Communism, are all about us. In the theater and picture

POLITICIANS NAMED IN GAS QUIZ

17,500 Gallons Credited to Routley, Kenna, Benz And Others, Report Says

Large quantities of gasoline purchased by Allegheny County were not delivered at the county stations, but were credited to private accounts, according to the report of M. C. Conick, of Main & Co., auditors, made public today.

The County Commissioners have issued instructions to send copies of the gasoline report to District Attorney Andrew T. Park. Copies probably will go to his office late today.

Last year, 17,500 gallons of gasoline so diverted, the report says, were credited to the accounts of J. E. Routley, former assistant chief clerk of the County Commissioners; C. C. Benz, chief clerk of the purchasing department; E. M. Kenna, former road commissioner; J. J. Gallagher, assistant in the purchasing department, and C. W. Doherty, of the Bureau of Accounts and Statistics.

$2,340 INVOLVED

These gasoline accounts represented a payment of $2,340 to the Peoples Service Company, which furnished all county gasoline, and the payment was taken care of by an overpayment by the county for its regular supply, the report reveals.

In 1930, 12,500 gallons which the county paid for were not delivered at county stations, but were credited on the books of the Peoples Service Company to the private accounts of Routley, Benz and Kenna, the auditors show.

Since 1928, the county paid $7,986 for gasoline not properly delivered and credited to the accounts of the men already mentioned and to that of William H. Ziefel, former chief clerk of the County Commissioners, the report reveals.

Although credited to these five persons, study by the auditors of the license numbers of cars actually receiving the gas they say, shows that it went to a large number of persons.

ARMSTRONG FAMILY

Charged to Routley's account since 1928, it is shown, were deliveries to numerous members of the Armstrong family, including Dorothy Armstrong and William Armstrong, 919 Carson street; Joseph G. Armstrong, 2651 Pioneer avenue, and Mrs. Ethel Armstrong, of 919 Carson street. A small

WAGNER BILL FOR RELIEF APPROVED

Senate Committee Ignores Hoover Program, Urges $500,000,000 Work Bonds

Unemployment relief continued to monopolize the attention of Congress today with these developments:

1—The Senate Banking Committee approved the Wagner bill providing a $500,000,000 public works bond issue, opposed by President Hoover, and voted down the administration proposal for loans through the Reconstruction Corporation.

2—Republican leaders predicted President Hoover would veto the Garner relief bill passed yesterday by the House.

3—The delegation of mayors meanwhile prepared to call on the President in behalf of the $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan program.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—(AP.)—The Democratic unemployment relief bill, providing for a $500,000,000 public works bond issue, opposed by President Hoover, was approved by the Senate Banking Committee.

The bill also provides for increasing the borrowing power of the Reconstruction Corporation by $1,500,000,000 for loans on self liquidating construction projects.

The committee voted, however, to eleminate provision for loans to competing private industries.

NO PRIVATE LOANS

The committee voted, 9 to 6, against the proposal strongly recommended yesterday by Secretary Mills for loans to private industry on self liquidating construction projects. This was a feature of the administration's Barbour relief bill, but was not included in the Democratic relief program introduced by Senator Wagner, of New York.

The committee yesterday approved as a separate bill, the Democratic proposal for a $300,000,000 fund for loans to states in relief of destitution, and an attempt was to be made in the Senate today to get an agreement for its consideration.

While considering the various relief measures, the committee gave no consideration to the gigantic bill sponsored by Speaker Garner, which passed the House yesterday.

VETO FORECAST

Meanwhile, Representative Tilson (Rep.), of Connecticut, said today he was sure a veto awaited the Garner relief bill if it should reach the White House.

Tilson, former majority leader, made his statement after talking to President Hoover, but said he had not asked the President what he would do if the bill should pass Congress.

The Garner plan was put through by an almost solid Democratic House vote with the aid of some Insurgent Republicans. The roll call showed 216 for it, 182 against.

Mr. Rockefeller's Conscientious Convictions on Prohibition

MR. JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, Jr., has written a magnificent letter to Nicholas Murray Butler in advocating the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The letter vibrates with the utmost sincerity and the highest moral sentiments.

It inspires the deepest respect for Mr. Rockefeller's courage and devotion to principle; also for his good judgment, open mindedness and sound American common sense.

This letter will do more than any document which has appeared in the whole discussion of the prohibition question to bring the nation to calm conviction on the ineffectiveness of prohibition as a temperance measure.

Mr. Rockefeller speaks not only as an earnest temperance advocate, but as a life long total abstainer.

HE SUPPORTED PROHIBITION because he hoped, like others equally sincere, that it would abolish the saloon and all the evils of intemperance.

He is at length sadly but certainly convinced that prohibition has proved a disastrous failure, that it has replaced the saloon with the still more evil speakeasy and has created many times more speakeasies than there ever were saloons.

Mr. Rockefeller realizes also that the whole underworld has been financed from the profits of illicit bootlegging, that all kinds of crime have been dangerously increased, that violation of law has become general and respect for law proportionately weakened.

He does not mention—probably out of consideration—that the law enforcement machinery has been largely corrupted and brought into co-operation with criminals and that even the sanctity of the bench has been to a degree violated, but he recites in the main the compelling arguments against prohibition which have frequently appeared in these columns and been spoken over the radio.

THE HEARST PAPERS are in entire sympathy with Mr. Rockefeller's statement in every detail. The Hearst papers have always been temperance papers. They led the crusade throughout the United States against whisky and against the saloon. Their cartoons and editorials were reissued in pamphlets by many temperance organizations.

The Hearst papers differ from Mr. Rockefeller only in the fact that they did not ever advocate nor have faith in prohibition as a temperance measure.

The Hearst papers believed always in the superior effectiveness of moral suasion, which was making such encouraging temperance headway in the United States before the brute force measures of prohibition came to impede the moral progress and reverse the temperance trend.

Nevertheless the Hearst papers gave prohibition ten years of fair trial without protest, in the hope that the well meant experiment might result in benefit.

But three years ago the Hearst papers decided that prohibition was a disastrous and nationally demoralizing failure and that it was not the part of patriotism longer to remain blind to its abuses and silent in the face of its fearful effects.

FOR THREE YEARS therefore the Hearst papers have crusaded against prohibition and for the substitution of some more successful temperance measure.

We regard our crusade against prohibition as a natural and logical and inevitable part of the crusade which for the whole existence of the Hearst newspaper institution we have waged against

PRIEST TO COMMAND

Invited to Washington, Will Urge Men to Disband Monday

The Rev. Dr. James R. Cox, pastor of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, and the leader of last winter's march of Western Pennsylvania's unemployed to Washington, announced today that he would fly to Washington early tomorrow to plead the cause of the nation's soldier bonus seekers before Congress.

An official invitation for Father Cox to come to Washington as commander-in-chief of the bonus marchers was delivered to him at the church today by Robert R. Williams, a World War veteran of Cleveland, who said it was from the general committee of the veterans assembled at Washington to urge authorization of immediate payment of the bonus.

TO TALK AT TOMB

Williams said 20,000 persons, most of them veterans, would hear Father Cox speak at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow and that the priest would be one of a committee of three to appear before Congress in behalf of the bonus.

aFther Cox said he would urge the veterans to disband and start for home on Monday after the congressional action on the bonus, scheduled for that day, is completed.

Williams said President Hoover's secretary had refused

Big Group Expected; Aid Asked of Etate After Arrest Angers Unit

State police were called by Pittsburgh, Homestead and Duquesne officials today to take charge of 200 members of the Workers' Ex-Service Men's League, an alleged Communistic organization, encamped on the Long Run road between McKeesport and Irwin, where they had been taken after massed Pittsburgh police prevented their marching on the City-County Building to demand trucks to take them to the soldiers' bonus demonstrations in Washington.

Four state troopers, commanded by Sergt. F. J. Gleason, arrived at the camp shortly after 1 p. m. and took charge, releasing police from Pittsburgh, Duquesne and Homestead, who were on guard.

LEADER ARRESTED

Assistant Superintendent of Police Ben R. Marshall, of Pittsburgh, personally made the call for state police help after he had arrested C. B. Cowan, of Cleveland, said by police to be the Communist leader of the "army," when the latter informed him that he would not stay in the Long Run road camp and was going back to Pittsburgh.

Cowan was docketed as being arrested on the South Side on a suspicious person charge. The South Side location was given because the camp is out of Pittsburgh police jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, Pittsburgh police awaited the arrival of 200 more men of the same group, whom those now in the Long Run road field left in New Castle early today.

Marshall said he would arrest the leader of the second delegation, J. C. Pace, of Detroit, as a suspicious person immediately upon his arrival.

Marshall also revealed that there is a telegram in his office asking that Pace be informed that his wife, in Detroit, just bore a son but telling him to continue

DOWNTOWN FIRE DRAWS THRONG

Tenants of the downtown McCance Building, Liberty and Seventh avenues and Smithfield street leaned out their windows and watched firemen fighting a fire in their own building this afternoon. A large crowd gathered on the sidewalk.

The fire started after a telegraph wire connected to the building fell across a trolley wire and caused a short circuit.

Spectators were endangered by the falling wire. Damage was estimated at $5,000 by Battalion Chief George P. Sparr.

Insull May Go to Europe; Business Ties Severed

CHICAGO, June 8.—(INS.)—Having severed his connections with more than half a hundred corporations, Samuel Insull, builder of a far-reaching utilities empire, may soon journey to Europe to relax from the arduous labors of a 50-year career.

His friends reported today that Insull and his wife probably will sail in the near future for England, where, half a century ago, the now retiring magnate began his quest of fortune with a $1.25 office boy's job.

His personal fortune virtually annihilated in an effort to save his investment companies from receiverships, Insull, it was reported, may receive a lifelong annual pension of $18,000 from the three big operating companies whose leadership he relinquished.

Insull rung the curtain down on his active business career yesterday by resigning from the board memberships—in some instances, chairmanships—of four Chicago-controlled transportation systems and 52 other corporations.

ANTI-DRYS TO DEMAND REPEAL PLANK IN G. O. P. PLATFORM

IGNORE HOOVER IN OPPOSING 'STRADDLE'

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service

CHICAGO, June 8.—A wet plank in the Republican platform of 1932 became about as much of a certainty today as anything can be in politics.

The only question which the convention next week will have to decide is the degree of wetness to which the party will commit itself and its candidates and the phraseology of the plank. It may be a cautious resubmission plank, it may be a bold, straight-out repeal plank, it may be modification, but whatever it is, it is going to be extremely unsatisfactory to the drys.

DRY FOES CONTROL

The Republican anti-drys are in the saddle—numerically and psychologically. They have a majority of the 1,154 delegates who about a week from tomorrow will renominate President Hoover and Vice President Curtis amid the customary hurrahs. Neither the fact that Mr. Hoover ran as a dry four years ago and has clung tenaciously to that side of the question ever since nor the fact that Mr. Curtis has been a lifelong and ardent dry will be permitted to interfere with the platform declaration. The wets have the votes.

Nothing that has happened in the 10 years controversy over prohibition has so deeply impressed the fence-straddlers as John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'s confession that prohibition is a failure and his implied intention of working for its repeal. It has made wet gamecocks out of many dry chickens.

To the effect of this Rockefeller blast was added today the surprising outcome of the Senatorial primaries in Iowa and North Carolina. In Iowa Senator Smith W. Brookhart, so ultra-dry that he has not let social amenities stand in the way of his naming those who drank at a private dinner, went down to defeat for renomination. In North Carolina, one of the two states which the recent Literary Digest poll showed dry by a small margin, Senator Cameron Morrison ran second to a wet candidate.

Members of the Republican National Committee gathering in force for tomorrow's meeting, and the swelling ranks of the delegates themselves, talked of little else today as they circulated through the hotel lobbies.

WET PLANK ASSURED

The tenor of their conversation might accurately be described thus:

"We are going to have a wet plank. If Mr. Hoover and Mr. Curtis don't like it that is just too bad."

Anti-prohibition sentiment is running through the rank and file of Republicans to an extent undreamed of six months ago. Of course, the party stalwarts from the states of the Atlantic seaboard have always chafed under the dry yoke of 1928. But now even the hitherto dry West apparently is falling into line.

C. C. Hamlin, ex-national committeeman from Colorado and now a member of the convention arrangements committee, declared today that although the Colorado delegation has not committed itself on the question, a majority of them favor an anti-prohibition declaration in the platform. Colorado has always been rated a dry state.

Council Authorizes Bond Sale for Debts

Sale of bonds aggregating $1,200,000 to fund the existing unfunded indebtedness of the city was authorized yesterday by City Council's finance committee. The bonds will be offered for sale by Controller James P. Kerr following final action by Council next Monday.

The money, should the bonds be sold, would be used for payment of contractors' and damage claims for improvements throughout the city, Kerr said.

Roosevelt Praises Rockefeller's Stand

ALBANY, N. Y., June 8.—(AP)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt last night praised John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for urging repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. The Governor, who is anti-dry, said:

"I am very glad to read the statement by John D. Rockefeller, Jr. It will be of real help in getting action at the next session of Congress so that in every state there can be a vote on the Eighteenth Amendment."

Clara Kimball Young Treasures Auctioned

LOS ANGELES, June 8.—(AP)—A treasure chest of objects of art showered on Clara Kimball Young, former reigning beauty of the screen, during her tours of the world, were sold yesterday under an auctioneer's hammer at a private sale.

Miss Young, now the wife of Dr. Arthur Fauman, was unable to attend the sale. She suffered serious injuries a week ago in an automobile accident at Ventura.

SENATE'S DRYS PLAN FIGHT

WASHINGTON, June 8.—(AP)—Republican prohibitionists of the Senate talked about making a concerted attack on the party's proposed resubmission plank yesterday, but reached no agreement.

Eight of them gathered without previous announcement in the office of Senator Borah of Idaho, stirring a lot of speculation. But when the discussion was over they indicated no prospect of unified action by them at the Chicago convention and Borah himself reiterated his decision not to go.

In Borah's gathering were Smoot of Utah, Robinson of Indiana, Steiwer of Oregon, Thomas of Idaho; Capper of Kansas, Goldsborough of Maryland, and Vandenberg of Michigan. Some already have declared themselves on prohibition, including Steiwer, who some time ago came out for resubmission.

Robinson has given James R. Garfield, chairman of the convention resolutions committee, a prohibition plank draft which took the stand that resubmission proposals must be accompanied by a substitute plan and repledging the party to observance and enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment so long as it remains in force.

BRANDT CLAIMS ROAD DAMAGE

State Senator Herman P. Brandt, who was mentioned in yesterday's county government investigation as having been benefited by resurfacing of a semi-public road past his home in the Perry highway, today made this statement:

"This road leads to St. Theresa Cemetery and to a plan of lots on which 25 families reside. It was in very bad condition before 60 feet of it was resurfaced. Before the improvement was made the surface water from the road drained into the Perry highway. Now it drains into the cellar of my home and I have had to buy an electric pump to force the water out."

Seth Thomas, 55, Dies: Clock Company Chief

JERSEY CITY, N. J., June 8.—(AP)—Seth Thomas, Jr., 55, president of the Seth Thomas Clock Company since 1915, died yesterday at Christ Hospital from a cerebral hemorrhage.

Registration Board Members Renamed

John K. Morrow, chairman, Thomas A. Joyce, Mrs. Sara C. Braun and John M. Henry, members of the Registration Commission of Allegheny County, were reappointed yesterday by Gov. Gifford Pinchot, according to word from Harrisburg. The appointments are effective June 15. The appointments must be confirmed at the next session of the Legislature, regular or special.

NEW YORK DRYS IGNORE JOHN D.

NEW YORK, June 8.—(AP)—The Anti-Saloon League of New York, through its board of directors, today issued a formal statement charging Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, with "hypocrisy" as regards his prohibition views. No allusion to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was made.

The statement, referring specifically to Dr. Butler, said in part:

"To assert, as Dr. Butler does, that while the Eighteenth Amendment is in the Constitution it ought to be obeyed, without condemning in unmeasured terms the violations of this law by the very men who now seek its repeal, is a form of hypocrisy against which we vigorously protest."

Raymond Pitcairn, of the Republican Citizens Committee Against National Prohibition, announced that at a mass meeting one June 13, in the Coliseum at Chicago, Mayor Anton Cermak, Mrs. Sabin, Dr. Butler and others will speak. The meeting will then memorialize the convention for a repeal plank, Mr. Pitcairn said.

Mother, Children Escape Home Blast

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa., June 8.—Mrs. Anna Sidelli and her five children escaped injury today when their home in Sykesville was wrecked by dynamite. Windows in nearby houses were broken.

State Troopers Hartwell and Abbott, who investigated, said a half dozen sticks of dynamite had been hurled against the side of the house.

GAS DIVERSION CHARGED TO POLITICIANS

amount was also received, according to the records, by Roy Walters, Armstrong's secretary.

Kenna, in his position as road commissioner, had a county car in which he used 6,958 gallons in the three-year period, the report sets forth. He also received 228 gallons for his personal car under his own account and 185 gallons for his personal car under Ziefel's account, it is shown.

The audit also shows that large quantities of gasoline were paid for in advance. Benz, in discussing the situation with auditors, said that gasoline is the only type of goods where the county followed this practice.

Instructions had been issued to various county departments that all goods were to be paid for in the current year, and this required advance purchases in the case of the gasoline, Benz stated.

That in a number of cases the purchasing department issued orders for much larger quantities than were requisitioned by the regular county departments was stated by Benz. In one instance it was revealed, the Department of Parks requisitioned 24,000 gallons and the purchasing department issued orders for 48,000 gallons.

Benz told auditors he became concerned over orders twice the quantity of the requisition and cancelled all of the excess with the exception of one order for 1,000 gallons.

DELIVERIES CHECKED

In some instances gasoline in the private accounts was delivered to cars bearing county licenses, the report says. In many cases, however, it is said, the deliveries were made to personal cars. The report states:

"With respect to cars carrying other than Allegheny County license plates there is nothing on the records which we examined to indicate the extent to which, if any, the said cars were used for county business."

Auditors figuring on the mileage records of county trucks and cars per gallon of gasoline and per quart of oil, found that the average mileage of a four-ton dump truck varied between 1.4 and 3.5 miles per gallon and on passenger automobiles varied between 8.4 to 12 miles.

The heavy trucks got from 11 to 61 miles per quart of oil and the passenger cars from 35 to 210 miles per quart.

The wide variations in performance may be accounted for by the fact that the records were poorly kept, the audit states.

ACCOUNT TRACED

W. F. Hadfield, former county architect, signed for 1,795 gallons of gasoline and 210 quarts of oil in 1931 and charged it to county car No. 159, a car which had been assigned to E. S. Brubaker, of the county road engineering department since 1927, the report showed.

During the same time Hadfield was receiving gasoline and oil for his personal car and charging it to the county car he no longer operated; he was being paid 5 cents a mile for the use of his own car for county purposes, as shown in expense reports filed by him, the audit discloses.

From James W. McFedrick, recently discharged by County Commissioners as division road superintendent, auditors said they learned that the furnishing of gasoline to Hadfield for use in his personal car for county business was authorized by H. B. Allen, former superintendent of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

Benz denied having knowledge of others using his account. He stated:

"If anyone besides myself got gasoline on my account, it was done without my knowledge. The use of county gasoline in my car was authorized by the County Commissioners for county business."

Mr. Rockefeller's Conscientious Convictions on Prohibition

We regard the crusade against the speakeasy as even more vital than the crusade against the saloon, not merely because speakeasies are more numerous than saloons ever were, but because the saloon was at least under the restraint of the law, while the speakeasy is beyond the pale of the law and utterly lawless in its evil activities,—and furthermore, because the young at least were excluded from the saloon, but are lured into the lawless speakeasy.

WE REGARD OUR crusade against the vile alcoholic concoctions of prohibition as even more vital than our crusade against whisky, not only because the concoctions of prohibition are more alcoholic and more poisonous and more destructive of health and morals, but because these vile prohibition concoctions are more generally distributed, even to the extent of being sold in reputable shops and drug stores and prescribed by family physicians.

We believe that there never has been in the whole history of our country as great a menace to American liberty and morality, law and order, peace and safety as has developed through the social and political evils of prohibition, and we welcome Mr. Rockefeller as an earnest and powerful ally in the campaign to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment and to substitute some more genuine temperance methods and measures.

We believe with Mr. Rockefeller that the first logical step in this campaign is the repeal of the constitutional amendment which has been the initial cause of such universal demoralization and damage.

THEN WE BELIEVE the nation, in serious and earnest effort to promote temperance, should adopt some system of sumptuary control,—perhaps like the proven method of Canada—which does not interfere with the legitimate liberty of the citizen, but which recognized the now obvious fact that moderation and temperance can best be established through judicious governmental regulation and through persistent moral suasion.

Our nation would have done well if it had always followed the advice of Lincoln, who said:

"It is not much the nature of man to be driven to anything, still less to be driven about that which is his own business."

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

BETTY'S FRIEND IN 'HYMIE' CASE

CLEVELAND, June 8.—(AP)—The name of Jean Redlick today was drawn into the second trial of "Pittsburgh Hymie" Martin for the murder of former Councilman William E. Potter.

Redlick and Betty Gray, missing star witness, occupied a suite in the same building where Potter was shot to death February 3, 1931. She has been the object of a police search for several weeks.

Mrs. Margaret Laub, wife of the caretaker of the building, testified under cross-examination that she saw Redlick, flushed and excited, on a stair landing with access to the murder suite on the night of the slaying. Questioned by the state, she also said Redlick telephoned when the body was found several nights later, asking her to send Betty Gray to him immediately.

Fred Laub, the caretaker, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Myrta McMurdy, of Beaver Falls, Pa., testified Martin was the man to whom Laub rented the murder suite on January 27, 1931.

QUIET IN CHILE, SAYS BANKER

NEW YORK, June 8.—(AP)—Officials of the National City Bank, who have been in direct telephonic communication today with Santiago, Chile, said that conditions in the South American country, following the recent revolutionary coup, were reported comparatively quiet.

L. D. Welch, manager of the National City branch in Santiago, speaking from the Chilian capital, said that little was known of the new government's intentions, but that, thus far, there was no evidence of any counter-revolutionary movement.

All of the Santiago banks are closed, Mr. Welch said, but it was thought they might be allowed to reopen tomorrow with the government placing a limit on withdrawals.

Life in Santiago, the banking manager added, was proceeding about as usual and there were no signs of warlike or revolutionary demonstrations. He did not believe the new government would repudiate Chile's international obligations or would attempt to expropriate foreign property.

ROCKEFELLER'S VIEWS SCORED AND PRAISED

Dr. Maits Admires Courage Of Dry Stand; Coyne Says Change Is Typical

The declaration of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment continued a subject of lively discussion today among supporters and opponents of prohibition. Comments of Pittsburghers follow:

DR. ALBERT E. DAY, pastor Christ M. E. Church—I admire and respect Mr. Rockefeller for the aid he has given in solution of social problems. In this instance I must differ with him decisively. While prohibition has not been as immediately successful as we had hoped, it no doubt has checked the flow of liquor. I favor giving it at least another decade of trial. Prohibition has been charged with being a primary cause of the breakdown of law enforcement when I think it has been a sufferer from that decline in morale and scorn of social discipline which has affected adversely all law enforcement.

PHILIP MURRAY, international vice president United Mine Workers of America—The United Mine Workers of America at its last convention went on record for modification of the Volstead act. Similar action was taken by the American Federation of Labor. The sensible thing to do, it seems to me, would be for both parties to declare for outright repeal or modification.

DR. CHARLES B. MAITS, Director of Health Department—It took a lot of moral courage for a man with Mr. Rockefeller's background to change his opinion on the prohibition question. I think it should be an example which will be followed by a lot of other influential men who may be wavering as to which stand to take.

MRS. T. M. STAHLMAN, president Congress of Women's Clubs—Personally I am sorry Mr. Rockefeller did not follow in the footsteps of his mother.

GEORGE W. MURREN, chief of county detectives—Mr. Rockefeller's action, in my opinion, threatens the very foundation of prohibition. He was one of the main contributors to the movement. I feel sure that now that Rockefeller has withdrawn, many others will follow him.

JAMES J. COYNE, State Senator—People should give consideration to Mr. Rockefeller's statement. I understand he was the largest contributor and mainstay of the drys for years and he did not change his views without giving long consideration to the subject. He reflects the change in sentiment going on all over the country. The government should legalize the manufacture and sale of beer. This would relieve unemployment within 60 days.

MRS. ENOCH RAUH, director of City Department of Welfare—Mr. Rockefeller's opinion as expressed in his letter to Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler is one of the most forceful, sane, orderly and practical statements that has been given voice since the dry controversy began. His attitude, so ably expressed on this question, should carry with it the joint respect of both the wets and drys alike.

JAMES M. CLARK, Director of Public Safety—Mr. Rockefeller's statement that the Eighteenth amendment is a failure comes at a psychological moment and will have a marked effect on the Republican National convention which opens in Chicago soon. Rockefeller places himself in higher esteem than ever before. I am in favor of repeal, but think there should be another amendment permitting the individual states to vote whether they would be wet or dry. In the wet states the liquor should be controlled by the government and made of the purest materials and sold cheaply, thereby eliminating the bootleggers.

PETER P. WALSH, superintendent of police—Mr. Rockefeller has always been an outstanding citizen of the country and now places himself before the people, not only of the United States but of the world, as a man who realizes the failure of prohibition. Prohibition has caused more sorrow and crime and has broken up more homes than any other known cause. It is about time the dry element and the dry Congressmen wake up and give the people what they want. I say this as a man who has never taken a drink.

THOMAS D. JONES, Morals Court Magistrate—Mr. Rockefeller has told the public what police officials have believed to be true regarding prohibition. Coming from Mr. Rockefeller, the same statements will carry much more weight than the expressions of police or social workers. As he was a heavy contributor to anti-saloon activities, the statement of Mr. Rockefeller leads one to believe that he will withdraw his financial and moral support from the dry forces.

O. K. EATON, attorney—Having cross-examined Mr. Rockefeller at length before the Interstate Commerce Commission, I believe he is the kind of man who would give long study and serious thought to any subject, particularly this one, before coming to such a definite conclusion.

WILLIAM FREW, broker and active in Crusader movement—It is the outstanding utterance on the subject by the most conspicuous individual concerned with it and I believe it sincere.

ALEXANDER P. LINDSAY, Independent movement leader—At a time like this, it is the only thing Mr. Roosevelt could say in the interest of true temperance after an honest study.

MYSTERY OF MISSING EDGEWOOD PASTOR DEEPENS

WORRIED WIFE PUZZLED OVER ABSENCE

Fears for Children Unless Husband Returns; Church Leaders Remain Silent

The whereabouts of the Rev. Victor A. Rule today remained as much a mystery as the cause for his resignation as pastor of the Edgewood Presbyterian Church, with the announcement by his wife in Phoenix, Ariz., that she did not know of his resignation until news dispatches reached her yesterday. An International News dispatch quoted Mrs. Rule as saying she had not heard from him for nearly three weeks.

CONGREGATION TO ACT

Members of the official board of the church today had no comment to make on the resignation or the cause. In some quarters it was said the resignation had been demanded.

The Rev. W. A. Jones, stated clerk of the Pittsburgh Presbytery, scheduled to meet next Tuesday, would not say whether the presbytery would take an action. The Edgewood congregation is to act on the resignation next Monday night. The Rev. C. C. Cribbs, moderator of the Pittsburgh Presbytery, was reported out of town.

FAMILY WORRIED

Mrs. Rule, according to a news dispatch, with her three children, was awaiting the close of schools in Phoenix to join the husband and father in Pittsburgh.

She was visibly worried, the dispatch said, and quoted Mrs. Rule:

"It is so unlike him to act like I am being led to believe he is acting. It has been nearly three weeks since I have heard from him. I can't imagine his resigning without giving longer notice.

"I know he was under great strain from his work in building the new Presbyterian Church here. His physician told me he should have taken a long vacation many months ago, and just before he departed for the East he was highly nervous and somewhat irritable.

"Though I would not be surprised to see him walk in the door any minute, yet I feel that something serious has happened. I don't know where he could go. To tell the truth I don't know what has happened and I don't know what to do. We have no relatives here and if he should not return soon or be found, the children and I are going to be placed in a terrible predicament."

DOCTOR ASKS DEATH

HARTFORD, Conn., June 8.—(AP.)—Dr. Harold N. Guilfoyle, who maintained for four years he was not guilty of the murder for which he was sentenced to a life term, has petitioned the Superior Court to order his execution for the crime.

A technicality in his indictment for the murder of Mrs. Clare Cavanaugh Gaudet in 1928 was made the basis of the petition, filed yesterday. The petitioner further pleaded that the granting of his request would be a humanitarian act.

Mrs. Gaudet was fatally wounded, and Guilfoyle received a wound which blinded his right eye, as they, with Mrs. Guilfoyle, Mrs. Gaudet's 5-year-old daughter and two others, were leaving Dr. Guilfoyle's apartment. At his trial he contended an unknown man fired the shots, although the state charged he shot Mrs. Gaudet and then wounded himself as a climax to a love affair.

The petition filed yesterday points out that he was arraigned on an indictment charging first degree murder, which carries a mandatory death sentence. The finding of the court, however, found him guilty, he said, in the second degree, "as charged in said indictment."

The petition was ordered turned over to public defender for study.

Mussolini Gives Women Recognition

ROME, June 8.—(AP.)—Premier Mussolini at last has placed woman almost on a par with man in the Fascist system.

Today under the party aegis was issued a new regulation "to carry fascism into the family." It reorganizes the feminine Fascist groups, ordering the formation of units for women and girls wherever there is a men's unit. This applies to about 4,000 communities in Italy.

Ride Victim Found in Road Near Camden

CAMDEN, N. J., June 8.—(INS.)—With the neck encircled in a length of sashcord and the back shattered by a dum-dum bullet, the body of an unidentified man, about 30 years old, was found today on the highway at Ancora, a suburb, by three small boys.

Fresh car tracks were found in the road. The man apparently had been strangled, shot and his body hurled from an automobile.

MEANS ON TRIAL IN HOAX OVER LINDY BABY

Accused by Mrs. McLean of Fraud in Collection of $104,000 as Fake Ransom

WASHINGTON, June 8.—(AP.)—The trial of Gaston B. Means on an indictment charging embezzlement and grand larceny of $104,000 from Mrs. Edward B. McLean in an alleged Lindbergh ransom fraud began today in the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

Selection of a jury was delayed by arguments over whether Catholics would be prejudiced either for or against the testimony of a priest who figured in strange negotiations between Means and Mrs. McLean after she hired him to recover the infant kidnaped on March 1 and later found dead.

A jury of 11 men and one woman was completed and accepted after the defense removed four Catholics by peremptory challenges. This was due to avoid any possibility of their being influenced by testimony of a priest.

Justice Proctor said he would have the jury locked up during recesses and overnight.

Col. Robert M. Guggenheim, close friend of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, was named as a witness for the prosecution by United States Attorney Leo A. Rover. The prosecutor also called the Rev. Francis Hurney, the priest.

T. Morris Wampler is counsel for Means.

shows, newspapers and magazines, pulpits and lecture halls, schools and colleges it hangs like a mist before the face of America, organizing the forces of unrest, undermining the morale of the working man. Day by day this canker eats deeper into the body politic.

URGES U. S. DEFENSE

"For the sentimentalism and emotionalism which have infested our country we should substitute hard, common sense.

"Pacifist habits do not insure peace or immunity. We should be at all times prepared to defend ourselves.

"As a rule those who preach, by word or deed, peace at any cost, have nothing worth protecting. And so long as humanity is governed by motives not in accord with the spirit of Christianity, we should be prepared.

"It is undefended riches which provoke war. The wealth of the United States presents a tempting spectacle which may ultimately lead to another World War or alignments eager for the sack of America."

In the Stadium were 10 city detectives on guard to prevent demonstrations.

CARRY SIGNS

Armed with signs expressing their sentiment, the three protesting students were taken from the Activities Building on the campus to Oakland Police Station in the police patrol. They were detained there during the program. They were Leonard Grmet of Turtle Creek; Alonzo Brewer and Lewis Teitelbaum, former Pitt student and now a Columbia law student and member of the disbanded Liberal Club which clashed with Pitt authorities a few years ago.

Not seen was the Rev. Willard C. Mellin, pastor of the Oakmont Presbyterian Church, who had announced he would speak against war at this protest meeting.

After being detained for two hours the three were jailed on charges of violating a city ordinance and held pending posting of $15 forfeits.

Police also took their signs which bore these messages:

"Big business creates war for profits. Youth is called upon to die for democracy."

WOUNDED IN FRANCE

(Gen. MacArthur was wounded in action in France during the World War.)

The attempted demonstration was a climax to protests filed against MacArthur's presence weeks ago by the students. In refusal of their request to cancel Gen. MacArthur's speech, Chancellor John G. Bowman pointed out that they represented a small percentage of the student body.

When Gen. MacArthur, former head at West Point, reached the city he was met by Chancellor Bowman, Col. E. J. Cullen, Col. T. M. Anderson, Dr. Albert E. Day, former chaplain of the Rainbow Division, and Lieut. J. F. Battley.

Today's was the largest graduating class in Pitt's history.

IMPRESSIVE MARCH

The vast, colorful throng of spectators found their seats to the strains of music from the University of Pittsburgh band. Shortly before 10:30, the impressive procession of trustees and faculty began. A spontaneous burst of applause greeted the graduating class, as capped and gowned, with thoughtful tread, its members took their places in the march.

The entire audience rose to its feet as the invocation was given by Dr. George Taylor, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Wilkinsburg. Chancellor Bowman presided and conferred scholastic and honorary degrees.

HONORARY DEGREES

Maurice Falk, Pittsburgh philanthropist; Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of Pittsburgh public schools; James N. Rule, superintendent of public instruction, and Charles E. Dickey, superintendent of Allegheny County schools received honorary degrees of doctors of laws. The honorary degree of master of science was conferred on William R. Ludewig, instructor in mechanical engineering at the university.

Six students graduated with highest honors—three in the college, two in the school of education and one in dentistry. Twenty-four graduated with high honor—14 in the college; two in business administration; four in education; three in engineering and one in dentistry.

Forty-three graduated with honor—16 in the college; four in business administration; nine in education; five in engineering; four in the school of mines; four in law school and one in dentistry.

HONOR STUDENTS

The six students who received the highest honors are Anna Louise Linn, who yesterday was crowned Queen of the May, and Mabel Overdorf, of the school of education; Harold Garwood, school of dentistry, and Thomas J. Carroll, Elaine Kathryn Foraker and Eugene E. Koch of the college.

ROME GREETS AMELIA

ROME, June 8.—(AP.)—Amelia Earhart Putnam received a warm official welcome from Gen. Italo Balbo, the air minister, as she emerged from the cabin of an army plane which brought her from Milan.

Mrs. John W. Garrett, wife of the American Ambassador, kissed her and Gen. Balbo greeted her in Italian through an interpreter, remarking:

"I am sorry Italy did not have a chance to greet you first."

Among the women welcomers was Lucrezia Bori, the Metropolitan Opera star, and house guest of the Garretts.

Premier Mussolini tonight will give a dinner in honor of Miss Earhart, but Gen. Balbo will preside in his stead. Tomorrow the Premier will receive Mrs. Putnam and her husband and the Pope probably will give them an audience later.

Bulgarians Slay 40 Turkish Girls

ISTANBUL, Turkey, June 8.—(AP.)—A dispatch to the semi-official newspaper Djumouriets from Bulgaria today said 40 Turkish girls between the ages of five and 12 were massacred by Bulgarians in the village of Kesarevo, province of Carnaore Hovitsa.

The Bulgarian villagers attacked the minority residents, slaughtered the girls, overpowered the Turkish male population and burned the Turkish school and mosque, the dispatch said.

SEVENTH JUROR PICKED TO TRY BLEDSOE

Tony Bell Brought Back From Federal Pen to Tell Story of Donohoe Killing

By AL GOUGH
Staff Correspondent.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 8.—A seventh juror was obtained today for the trial of R. C. Bledsoe and Cosmo Stengoni, charged with the racket murder of Constable Jack Donohoe three years ago. A new panel of 40 jurors was summoned today as the panel of 100 called Monday neared exhaustion. Both panels are about equally divided as to men and women. Seventy-eight had been examined before the seventh juror was obtained.

Those already seated in the jury box are:

W. Allen McDowell, Uniontown; Emmer H. Kelley, South Brownsville; John Helms, Continental; Mrs. Virginia Parsons, Fayette City; J. Kenneth Hoffman, Dawson; Mrs. Carmine Earle, Dunbar Township, and Mrs. Anna Burkey, South Connellsville.

Anthony (Tony) Bell, former county detective and state's star witness, was brought to Uniontown from Buffalo, where he has been serving out a federal sentence, and lodged in the juvenile quarters of the county jail. Bell, already acquitted of the Donohoe murder, now confesses to having a part in it and names Bledsoe, Stengoni and Carmella Sturelli, unapprehended, as accomplices.

With Bell at the time of his arrest near Buffalo several months ago was Theodore Dawson, also of Fayette County. The two were impersonating federal officers. Both have been convicted and are serving sentences. Dawson also was brought here to testify. They are in custody of United States deputy marshals.

TRAIN WRECK INJURES 50

DEANS, N. J., June 8.—(INS.)—More than 50 men, women and children today suffered from more or less serious injuries received when an Atlantic City passenger train bound for New York crashed into a derailed freight train.

Hysterical screams of the injured and panic-stricken occupants of the overturned cars were heard over a wide area.

An immediate call for first aid brought ambulances quickly from Trenton, Princeton and New Brunswick and emergency hospitals were established on the railroad tracks. Investigation indicated the wreck caused no fatalities.

Five Pennsylvania Railroad express trains due in Pittsburgh between 5 and 10 a. m. today were from one to three hours late because of the collision at Deans, N. J. The Pittsburgher, due here at 9:30 a. m., was 95 minutes late as it pulled out of Altoona.

The high pressure area is still centered north of the Great Lakes and there was a considerable rise in pressure over the Ohio Valley states and the lake region. As a result, there was a marked drop in temperature over that section. Light frost was quite general over the lowlands of Western Pennsylvania and Eastern West Virginia this morning. The low pressure over the South and West is causing considerable cloudy weather over those sections, with showers over the Lower Ohio Valley, the Central Mississippi Valley states and the Northern and Central Rocky Mountain states.

MARKET HOUSE RUN WITH BUT 6 EMPLOYES

26 on Payroll When City Operated Building Year Ago at Loss, Foley Says

Six men are on the regular payroll of the Pittsburgh Market Protective Association, operating the Diamond Market, against 26 when it was managed by the city and jobs handed out as political rewards.

More than six are employed at present, Ben Kalchthaler, president of the association, said, on account of repairs and alterations. The organization last year obtained a five-year lease on the buildings at $10,000 a year and pays the expense of operation including repairs.

OPERATED AT LOSS

Prior to last June the city payroll for market help amounted to $40,037 and a deficit of $5,000 to $10,000 a year resulted, Chief Clerk E. J. Foley, of the City of Bureau Property, said today. Mr. Foley said he presented a plan to Council several years ago which he believes would have returned a profit of $25,000 a year to the city, but a deaf ear was turned to it.

Mr. Kalchthaler said today it is a little early to say just how the 75 market tenants will fare under the new lease arrangement, because of the expense of alterations, including removal of overhead steam pipes. Repairs of various kinds are being made including a new refrigeration system, new entrances and a new steam heating plant.

Mr. Kalchthaler added:

"When we finish the job, we will have a market house the citizens of Pittsburgh will be proud of. The tenants and the public are indebted to the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board for bringing this about. We intend to ask Council to permit us to construct new entrances to the market houses, leading in from Market street. This will prove a big improvement, if we are allowed to do it."

Foley said today that the payroll of the market house one year ago included one clerk, one constable, eight elevator men, two female cleaners, two watchmen, three engineers, a driver and eight laborers.

Today the regular payroll under the tenant management, Mr. Kalchthaler said, consists of one watchman, three sweepers and two elevator men.

STATE POLICE GUARD CAMP OF VETS

to Washington as friends were caring for the mother and child.

MEN IN UGLY MOOD

"These men are a bad lot and they're in an ugly mood.

"They are the same men who seized the railroad yards in Cleveland last week and then fought police.

"I'm out of my jurisdiction here but if I withdraw my men these fellows will overrun the entire community.

"Their leader Cowan is the worst Red I have ever seen."

Fifteen Pittsburgh, six Homestead and six Duquesne police then were on guard at the camp. Marshall, Chief of Police Thomas J. Flynn of Duquesne and Burgess John J. Cavanaugh of Homestead, were in charge of the officers.

INVASION BALKED

One hundred city police met the "army" this morning at the Point Bridge as it came down West Carson street from McKees Rocks where it had left a P. & L. E. freight train from New Castle.

The marchers were then en route, they said, to the City-County Building to present their demands.

Marshall, in charge of the patrol wagon and radio car crews and motorcycle, horse and foot officers assembled at the bridge, loaded the marchers on five city trucks and took them through the South Side.

RUSHED THROUGH TOWNS

Instead of stopping and unloading them there, the trucks were driven rapidly on through West Homestead, Homestead, Munhall, Duquesne and McKeesport.

In Homestead and Duquesne additional police joined the escort of Pittsburgh officers.

When the caravan reached Rainbow Gardens, in Long Run road, only three miles and a half from Irwin, it stopped and Marshall ordered the men out of the trucks.

They formed an improvised camp in a nearby field and, under the police guard, soon formed into sullen, detached groups.

Many of the campers went bathing in Long Run Road creek nearby.

FOOD SCARCE

Lack of food added to the growing discomfort of the marchers, as none of the nearby communities had facilities nor—apparently—the inclination to feed them. The proprietor of the Rainbow Gardens sent them his only supply of foodstuffs—four large cans of pretzels, which vanished rapidly before their hungry onslaughts.

Later three men from McKeesport and Versailles brought a supply of cold weiners and bread which also met with a gusty welcome.

Robert B. Thomson, chairman of the Republican party in Versailles Township, said:

"I think the police of Pittsburgh should be severely criticized for dumping these men in this district. While they had the trucks, they should at least have taken the men to the Lincoln highway or the B. & O. Railroad tracks instead of leaving them here where we have no police protection."

The marchers were part of a delegation of 400 which was stranded in New Castle yesterday when Lawrence County and city officials refused to furnish transportation to Pittsburgh.

"Commander" Cowan told reporters they were part of 800 or 900 who last week seized Cleveland railroad yards, paralyzing train service and, later, battled police.

SHUNNED BY GROUP HERE

They arrived shortly after 8 a. m. this morning in McKees Rocks, unloading from a P. & L. E. freight train near "The Bottoms." With an American flag at their head they marched to West Carson street, and up that thoroughfare toward the city.

South Side veterans, leaving for Washington this morning, refused to join Cowan's "army" because of its Communistic leanings.

Cowan halted his "army" in the 1500 block on West Carson street, apparently to force the police to make the next move. His followers, many of them Negroes and all obviously worn and dirty from the rigors of their efforts to reach Washington, lolled along the roadway, dejected and sullen. Cowan said:

"The commissioner of police has ordered our marchers escorted under police guard through this city to Homestead, which is 12 miles from McKees Rocks, where we got off the train.

DEMAND FOOD, REST

"He has refused to allow us to stop for food or to wait for the other half of our group which was waiting for another train when we left New Castle.

"We have protested this action to the commissioner on the grounds that these men have been without sufficient food during the time of the march, which is eight days, and have had no sleep for 36 hours and have requested him to obtain a place where these men can rest, eat and wash themselves while waiting for the rest of men to arrive, if they are not more than two hours in doing so.

"We are not waiting the action of the police."

While the "marchers," most of whom were from Cleveland, Detroit and Toledo, waited for the first move of police, they kept an American flag which headed their march through McKees Rocks and into the city at the front of their column.

There was no disorder, however, when the police ordered the men to climb aboard the trucks. They climbed in quietly, although, for the most part, they seemed sullen. Murmurs of protest were heard in the ranks, but none grew to violence.

Cowan was bitter in his denunciation of Baltimore and Ohio and Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroad officials and city and county officials at New Castle for alleged mistreatment there. He said:

"If it hadn't been for private citizens, we wouldn't have had a thing to eat."

In the meantime other straggling units of the veterans' army were wending orderly ways toward Washington.

Thirty-five veterans from the South Side and South Hills, assembled in Armstrong playground, South Thirteenth and Sarah streets, today to begin their trek to Washington. Sam Harris, of 343 Chalfonte street, had a truck and auto with 100 gallons of gasoline for the march.

Cox to Lead Vets in Capital

the bonus followers an interview with the President and that a plea from United States Senator James J. Davis had failed to alter this verdict.

The priest plans to return to Pittsburgh by plane late tomorrow.

Army Hinted Ready As Vet Crisis Grows

WASHINGTON, June 8.—(AP)—Police kept constant touch today with federal authorities as the numbers of the veterans here seeking the bonus payment continued to grow.

There were reports, apparently well founded but unconfirmed by officials, that army posts in the vicinity of Washington had taken precautionary protective moves in view of the mounting numbers of veterans in the city. Police estimated that nearly 10,000 would be in the capital by the end of the week.

Officers attached to Bolling Field, the Army airport adjacent to one of the veterans' encampments, were asked not to leave their reservation after noon today. Their wives were advised not to leave the post unescorted.

The inhospitable reception they received at the hands of police and Capitol Building officials when they applied for permission to parade there today caused the leaders of the Communist organization, the Workers Ex-Service Men's League, to cancel their demonstration for today.

Vice President Curtis and Speaker Garner directed that they be given no permit to parade on Capitol grounds. Metropolitan police had granted permission for the radicals to parade in the city, but changed their minds after the Curtis-Garner action.

The Communists organization, claiming a membership of 2,000 among the veterans now in the city, was estimated by police to have an actual membership of some 250 out of nearly 8,000 veterans in the encampments. Several of the agitators were arrested and taken to station houses yesterday by the veterans themselves. Police advised them to leave the city and some were known to have left.

PLAN MOVE FRIDAY

The league now plans to go to the Capitol Friday and attempt to present petitions to the Vice President and the Speaker. Since they have no parade permit, their numbers necessarily will be very limited.

Meanwhile their demand for the bonus flaunted through the nation's capital in a grime parade, thousands of war veterans today sat tight awaiting a response from Congress.

Five thousand of them marched in shirt sleeves and ragged clothing last night down Pennsylvania avenue, a route made historic by countless resplendent parades. They tramped along in column of fours, headed by a group of bemedaled ex-soldiers and an American Legion fife and drum corps.

Police guarded the long line, and taut steel lines kept a huge crowd of onlookers on the sidewalks, but there was no disturbance.

Banksville Youth Hurt by Automobile

Edward Loy, 17, of 948 Banksville road, today was recovering from injuries received when struck by an automobile yesterday in Shady drive, near Washington road, Mt. Lebanon. The car was driven by R. J. Alderdice, 2760 Ammon avenue, Dormont, police reported.

Motor Club Extends Wooden Paving Drive

The campaign against wooden paving blocks on downtown streets will be continued until all such paving has been eliminated, the Pittsburgh Motor Club announced today. More than 10,800 square yards of wood blocks have been removed since the campaign opened several years ago, officers of the club stated. These figures were reported by Public Works Director Edward G. Lang.

CHICAGO, June 8.—(INS)—Edward F. Swift, packing magnate, left an estate of $5,000,000 with personal property approximating $3,500,000, according to the will filed for probate yesterday.

One-third of the estate is left to the widow, Hortense; one-third is held in trust for the three children, and the other third is reserved for charitable and minor bequests. The will provided for the building of two hospitals in Chicago.

MARCHING VETS LIKE GHOSTS --GIBBONS

War Heroes of '17 and '18 Thrown Into Discord, Correspondent Declares

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—I saw them march last night.

They were the men who won the war in "17 and 18" and were thrown into the discard in the battle of "29, 30 and 31."

In the old days—young and strong, well shod and equipped, well fed and received with open arms they marched the length of Pennsylvania avenue, past the Capitol and past the White House where Woodrow Wilson reviewed them.

In the light of day and the glory of youth and with the prayers and hopes of the nation pinned above their khaki-clad breasts, they marched that same route betwen thousands of proud and admiring public officials and civilians.

MARCH IN DARK

Last night they marched in the dark like ghosts out of the forgotten past. Four abreast they marched—5,000 strong.

Few uniforms, and those ragged and wear-worn.

The grease stained overalls of jobless factory workers.

The shoddy elbow patched garments of idle clerks.

All were down at the heel. All were slim and gaunt and their eyes had a light in them. There were empty sleeves and limping men with canes.

They were 5,000 hungry ghosts of the heroes of 1917. Not so young now. They came back triumphant from the smoke of battle in distant wars, only to go down in the battle of life with their own kind. Their own people. Their own government. The government they fought for.

They did not march in the light of day. They marched in darkness. The moving picture record of the march of the 5,000 ghosts will be dim and obscure, if any at all.

That's why they marched at night with their shoes worn thin and their boots run down at the heel. They marched without hats, many of them because they have no hats. Many were without coats.

But they were clean-shaven, every man of them. And the shirts they wore, though patched and torn and thin and cheap, were clean from their own washing.

CARRY FLAG

And they marched, proud and unashamed, carrying the flag they fought for. The flags were not carried on regular staffs. They were on make-shift pieces of patched wood. Some of the flags were carried proudly aloft on fresh-cut saplings from the river bottoms, where these ghosts live.

You know how pitiful and abandoned a garment looks when it is nailed on an oar and floated above a raft as a signal of distress at sea.

That is how their flags looked tonight.

They carried no flagrant banners. They marched silently as ghosts should.

They were men of the old Fighting First. They were the ragged remnants of Pershing's own. They were survivors from the glorious Second Division from the Twenty-sixth and the Thirty-sixth and Forty-second and the Eighty-sixth and the Ninety-first. They were the ghosts of the A. E. F. the largest and greatest army that ever marched under the American flag.

They marched in darkness.

ROUTE RESTRICTED

They were not allowed to march past the Capitol this time. Nor the office buildings of Congress. It would bring distress to the Congressmen.

They did not march past the White House tonight. They were not allowed to. They would bring distress to the President of the richest nation in the world.

They were allowed to march just around and past one corner of the great United States Treasury at the corner of Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue.

It also was dark.

Some said that President Hoover could, if so inclined, have seen the march of the 5,000 hungry ghosts from either the south portico or the upper windows of the White House. From those positions he could have seen them.

I hope he saw them march last night.

Uhrichsville Vets Pick Group for Trip

UHRICHSVILLE, O., June 8.—A meeting of Tuscarawas County veterans has been called by C. A. Wright, Uhrichsville, to determine who will make up the county's bonus force to Washington. Wright announced that 75 soldiers had promised to make the trip.

Ethel Clayton's Divorce Set Aside

LOS ANGELES, June 8.—(AP.)—With the setting aside of a divorce decree granted her from Ian Keith, Ethel Clayton, former screen star, was free today to file a separate maintenance suit.

Miss Clayton's attorneys asked the decree be set aside, claiming Keith, an actor, had failed to pay the actress $4,500 under a property settlement. The actor's attorneys opposed the motion.

Cost Her $4.25 To Reduce 65 Pounds

"Worth It," Miss Bates Says.

If you're young and fat, read what Miss Bates of Beech, Iowa, has to say about Kruschen Salts—if you are middle age or old, Kruschen shows you the way to lose fat the SAFE way.

"I took one bottle of Kruschen Salts a month for five months. It amounted to $4.25 and I reduced 65 lbs. but it was worth it. Imagine, just 22 years old and weighing what I did. I could not enjoy myself as other girls did. I could not get the clothes I wanted. I think it is wonderful the results Kruschen Salts give."

To lose fat the safe, sane way—take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning—eat less fatty meats, potatoes and sweets—a jar that costs but a small sum lasts 4 weeks. Get it at any drug store in the world—but be sure for your health's sake to ask for and get Kruschen Salts. It's the little daily dose that does it.

Dreams of what you could do if you had the money need not all be myths. You CAN have money. Spend a little less than you make and put the difference in the Bank, week by week, regularly. $1 will start a Savings Account for you in this Bank.

ANOTHER TRADE GROUP BACKS JOB BONDS

Pattern Makers Cite U. S. Business Collapse in Demand for Federal Aid

Stressing that 85 per cent of its members have been unemployed since early in 1931 not through the machine age but due to a collapse of business nationally, the Pattern Makers' Association of Pittsburgh today had joined with thousands of other trade groups of the country in demanding that Congress give immediate relief to unemployment [illegible] work on necessary public projects financed by the proposed $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan.

The association [illegible] approved a [illegible] to Congress. The memorial [illegible]:

"No improvement can be accomplished unless a unified program on a national scale is undertaken by the federal government so that the increased earning power of one group can reflect in the varied industries in all sections."

Secretary-Treasurer Charles [illegible] Swift averred [illegible] the machine [illegible] unemployment is [illegible]. He said:

"Our association is composed of skilled workers whose trade has felt no inroad through machines. That indicates there is a total collapse of business. There has been no employment for 85 per cent of our members since early in 1931. The remaining 15 per cent has averaged two to three weeks of employment in the same period. Our relief efforts are nearing the breaking point, with funds becoming exhausted. When the members had money they were contributing to other relief agencies and now face the near necessity of asking for aid themselves."

R. A. Ivy is president of the association. Copies of the memorial are being sent to Senators David A. Reed and James J. Davis, as well as to local members of the House of Representatives.

Parks to Stay as Alaska's Governor

WASHINGTON, June 8.—(AP)—Interior Department officials said yesterday that the administration of George A. Parks, Alaska's Governor, is entirely satisfactory and that published stories that he is to be supplanted are without foundation.

Col. James Gordon Steese, who is in Alaska on a pleasure trip, was said in Seward reports to have been selected to succeed Parks. Interior officials gave Steese letters of introduction and they believe that their presentation has given rise to a misapprehension as to the purpose of his visit.

Idaho Organizes For Cricket Fight

BOISE, Idaho, June 8.—(INS)—Idaho today declared war on millions of crickets which invaded the Pocatello [illegible] threatening crops and [illegible].

The National Guard was mobilized and [illegible] with several hundred [illegible] including Indians [illegible] officials will fight the crickets over a [illegible] 50 miles square in the Fort Hall Indian Reservation.

Fliers Plan New Trans-Atlantic Hop

LACK OF FUNDS WORRIES COX

With the need for funds to finance the many welfare activities he is conducting becoming more urgent, Father Cox is more or less worried about the near future. It was thought that summer would temper the distress but the unemployment situation seems to be getting more serious and requests for aid are increasing.

Father Cox

Although Father Cox goes to Ireland Friday for the Eucharistic Congress he leaves behind him an organization that will take care of his work.

He has asked his "Blue Shirts" to devout as much of their time as possible to his unemployment relief activities, paying particular attention to the opportunity to get additional funds through the Father Cox-Sun-Telegraph Home Delivery Drive. He has sent word to the heads of this organization to come in to his headquarters and get a supply of Sun-Telegraph subscription blanks, or clip them from the Sun-Telegraph, and get them signed wherever possible.

Yesterday the Sun-Telegraph gave Father Cox another satisfactory check covering additional commissions for subscriptions that had come in on account of the drive.

For every subscription that comes in on the Sun-Telegraph special home delivery blank herewith printed and for every subscription otherwise secured through the efforts of the "father of the jobless" and his aides Father Cox gets a liberal commission in cash which is employed to furnish food and clothing to his army of destitute men, women and children. Here is your opportunity to help a more than worthy cause and at the same time bring a GOOD newspaper to your home.

WEISSMULLER ON WCAE -:- News About Artists And Studios -:- RADIO PROGRAMS

Girl Olympic Swim Star Speaks

The art of swimming, especially as it pertains to the coming Olympic Games contests, is discussed [illegible] WCAE [illegible] at 6:35.

Mr. Weissmuller

Johnny Weissmuller, who is appearing this week at Loew's Penn Theater, and [illegible] Kight, Homestead [illegible] Olympic [illegible] come to the microphone to discuss the coming Games and to give [illegible] to all who would swim. [illegible] Kight's [illegible] the discussion [illegible].

Others who participate in the program include [illegible] of WCAE, Miss [illegible], pianist, [illegible] and Tom Birks of the Sun-Telegraph sports staff and Harry Keck, sports editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, who is master of ceremonies.

Victor Clark, economic consultant of the Library of Congress, discusses the subject "How Recovery Came from Past Depressions" when he appears as guest speaker on WCAE tonight at 8:30.

A new series of weekly appearances by John Erskine, famous American novelist and writer, during the Daily Circle program on WCAE is inaugurated tomorrow at 12 noon. Erskine during the series will discuss many of the present day problems from the point of view of the woman listener. His talks replace those by Mrs. Emily Post, who leaves next week for a four months' vacation.

Program Pointers

Oliver Smith, one-time "hidden man" of radio, presents another of his tenor song groups when he is featured with Josef Pasternack's Orchestra during the Melody Moments broadcasts over KDKA tonight at 8:30. One of Pasternack's own compositions, "Garden Frolics," also is heard. Smith was formerly starred with the Dance Gypsies and known only as the "Gypsy Tenor" until public curiosity reached such a peak that he decided to appear under his real name.

Mr. Smith

"The Marionettes," the story of a doctor who killed his patient for his fortune only to discover that the victim was penniless, is the O. Henry story dramatized on KDKA at 9.

A tango entitled "Cigaret" is featured by Nat Shilkret and his orchestra during the quarter hour with Ruth Etting on WJAS at 10.

Grace Moore sings a group of hits from two famous light operas, "The Merry Widow" and "The Student Prince," during her program with the Revelers on WCAE at 9.

Tribute is paid to chop houses and a monument to the old-fashioned mutton chop is suggested by George Rector during the "Our Daily Food" program on WCAE at 9:45 and KDKA at 10:30 tomorrow morning.

Fan Fare

Virginia Arnold, popular CBS pianist heard frequently over the networks, has a yearning to be a psychologist and envies her younger sister who is one . . . and Tito Guizar, the romantic Mexican tenor, would like to be a poultry farmer . . . Georgie Price would be a jockey . . . Sammy Prager would finish a course in medicine and become a surgeon . . . and Adele Ronson would be an actress and dye her raven hair to a titian red.

Miss Arnold

NBC musical directors have often proved themselves ingenious in devising new instruments to be used as batons, but Louis Katzman reached the heights recently—he took a hammer used for the chimes and began to wave it. The musicians didn't know whether he was conducting or threatening.

Welcome Lewis is testing a new quarter-size microphone, which is worn in a corsage for her forthcoming stage appearance.

Russ Columbo is considering an offer to take the lead in Pola Negri's next movie. The last time he was in her company he played a violin off stage.

Charles J. Correll, Andy of Amos 'n' Andy, sold newspapers in his home town, Peoria, Ill., as a boy, and once was a bricklayer . . . Freeman Gosden, Amos, was a traveling salesman before he went into radio, as were Ray Perkins, Graham McNamee and James Wallington.

CONTRACT BRIDGE -:- How to Play and How to Win -:- By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Cautious Procedure Best in Case of Misfit Hands

The object of contract bidding is to find the best final declaration in the combined hands of the partnership. When it is early apparent that the hands do not fit—that is, one player is strong in suits in which the other is weak—the safe rule is to proceed cautiously in bidding, and in play, when the final declaration has been reached, to apply the knowledge gained by the opposing declarations to the play of the hand.

An interesting example of the successful play of a misfit hand was sent me recently by Mr. A. P. Jurgenson of Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Jurgenson held the South hand and states that the East and West players were nationally prominent.

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

		1 ♥	2 ♦
3 ♣ (1)	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	4	Pass
5 ♣	Double	Pass	Pass

(1) When East bid diamonds the complete misfit of the hand became apparent to Mr. Jurgenson. Void of the suits bid by his partner he decided that it was highly improbable that North could hold support for his suit. This correct inference as well as North and South's vulnerability decided him to proceed cautiously.

When West opened with the Ace of hearts it was evident that he was much embarrassed for an Opening lead and the makeup of his hand particularly in view of the Double became an open book. He was thus marked as void of diamonds bid by his partner as indeed the cards in sight in the North and South hands made extremely probable and also as probably holding in addition to four or five clubs the Ace of spades. South ruffed the heart Ace with the club 8 and then laid down four rounds of trumps. West grasped the situation and attempting to avoid a throw-in played his high clubs in order to avoid taking the trump trick.

South's retention of the club 2 however frustrated this play and on the fifth round of trumps in which Mr. Jurgenson led the deuce West was forced to win with the lowly trey. West now desperately laid down the spade Ace and Mr. Jurgenson discarded a diamond. West was entirely helpless and was forced to lead into the Dummy giving South his contract of five clubs doubled.

If West instead of opening either of his aces had led a club originally the hand must have been defeated one trick as West would then have been forced to take the fifth round of clubs and permitted to cash the two major aces for a slight penalty.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper inclosing a two-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

TODAY'S QUESTION

South dealer. North and South are vulnerable.

The bidding

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

What should East lead holding ♠ 9 5 4 ♥ 9 6 4 ♦ Q 9 6 5 ♣ K 10 4 2

Answer: Nine of hearts. The short suit lead of a major through the strong hand is better than the four-card minor with no side re-entries. The lead of the 9 of hearts furthermore gives much less information to the declarer than the lead of the 2 of clubs.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Dance Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of mine has invited me to a supper party to be given by his fraternity at a cafe. He said it is to be informal and that is what confuses me. Just what is considered "informal?" I have been to so many affairs that were "informal" and invariably the girls were dressed in formal gowns.

For this supper party I thought I might wear a black chiffon velvet dress with little puffed sleeves. It is a little more dressy than the usual informal dress, but the fact that the party will take place at 9 o'clock made me feel as though it called for something more dressy.

Will you please advise me just what would be correct? A. A.

The black chiffon velvet dress might be quite appropriate to wear, since even a hint of a sleeve takes a dress usually from the formal class and places it in the informal class. But since it is fairly late in the season for velvet dresses, even chiffon velvet ones, have you a chiffon dance dress that you might wear for this occasion? This sort of dress is usually about what is "indicated" for a party of this kind . . . not of a formal material, not formally designed in mode, and easy to dance in.

The Wedding Ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Upon receiving an interlocutory degree of divorce, is the wedding ring discarded?

Upon receiving such interlocutory degree, is the original engagement diamond ring discarded from the left hand? If so, on what finger should it be worn, if placed on the right hand? J. S.

When a woman receives her divorce, she may do as she wishes about wearing her rings, her engagement and wedding ring. It is entirely a matter of choice of her attitude toward the rings and their spiritual value to her. Usually she either wears them on her left hand or doesn't wear them at all . . . it seems rather absurd I think for her to wear them on her right hand.

Household Hints

A teaspoonful of strong vinegar in the last rinse water will prevent black stockings from losing their color.

A tablespoonful of vinegar in the lard in which doughnuts are to be fried will prevent them from absorbing so much fat.

It's Never Too Late to Tell Your Mother You Love Her, Says Fay King

IF YOU DID NOT WRITE HER FOR MOTHER'S DAY—WRITE TO HER TODAY!
ANY DAY OF THE YEAR ON WHICH YOU MAKE YOUR MOTHER HAPPY IS MOTHER'S DAY FOR HER!
WHEN IT IS TOO LATE YOU WILL NOT REMEMBER WHAT YOU DID, BUT WHAT YOU MEANT TO DO, AND COULD HAVE DONE—BUT DID NOT DO
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

Are you one who for some reason or other did not, or could not remember your Mother on Mother's Day?

There is no need to regret.

Today, tomorrow, and every day on which you write, or show in some way that you love her, becomes Mother's Day for her.

In fact, it will give her even greater pleasure to be remembered by you without the reminders of that official day set aside for honor to all mothers.

For then she knows that it was Mother's Day for just the two of you.

Write her even if you see her every day. The written word can be read and re-read. Tell her that you love her—while there is yet time.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Intervenes to Sustain Mother Graham's Orders

I was sorry for Bill and Hank as I saw their faces flush painfully at Dicky's sharp query.

"And you both came away and left the place unwatched?"

I knew it was a necessary part of the boys' training that rigid discipline in just such things should be enforced. But I was absurdly relieved when Bill answered sturdily:

"But we didn't, sir. Jim said he'd watch the fence for us while we came and got you."

"I beg your pardon most sincerely, Bill," Dicky said with the same grave courtesy which he would have accorded a man whom he had criticized unfairly. "I might have known you wouldn't pull anything like that."

Bill's face flushed with pleasure but he said nothing, plainly waiting for the men to decide what was to be done.

SMALLER BOYS EAGER

Harry and Dicky exchanged glances.

"What do you think," Dicky said. "A truce or a threat?"

"Well," Mr. Underwood drawled, "a white flag's a white flag the world over. We might as well go out and take a look at it."

"Just a minute," I said and they all looked at me in surprise, for neither Lillian nor I ever question the arrangements for guarding the farmhouse.

"Of course," Harry said, as both men turned courteously to me, "what's on the well known mind?"

"Just this," I said, and then told them of the discovery Junior and Roderick had made, and of the eagerness of the two little boys to be on the spot when the white "something" was taken from the fence post.

"I didn't promise anything definitely," I finished, "but I told them I would ask you and see if anything could be done."

"Which sweetly passes the buck too me," Dicky observed with a rueful grin. "Well, old dear, I've passed it to you many a time, so I suppose we'll have to see what can be done. What's your opinion?" as he turned to Mr. Underwood.

PLAN APPROACH

"Exactly the same as yours," Mr. Underwood said. "If it's a possible thing we've got to let the little lads in on this. But how?"

Dicky grinned broadly and waved an airy hand to him.

"I leave it all in your hands, oh sapient sage!" he said. "You lead and I'll follow, singing all the way."

"Ye-ah?" Mr. Underwood's tone was ribaldly insulting. "You open your mouth for one note, and what you call your singing voice will be no more."

"Boys, do you know where Winchell is?" asked Mr. Underwood, naming one of the secret operators whom my father had brought in to patrol the outer boundaries of the farm.

"Yes," Bill replied promptly, "he's up in the pasture."

"Then you boys beat it up there pronto," Mr. Underwood directed. "Tell him what you've seen and ask him to ease around on the other side of that fence post—which is not our land, remember, so be careful—and have him make sure that there is nobody lurking on the other side. Tell him to get near enough to the post to see what the thing is, and that there's no trap about it, but don't any of you touch it until your Uncle Dicky and I get there with the little boys.

"When you see us coming, you wigwag us if it's safe for us to bring the youngsters on. Don't you think that scheme holds water, my bucko lad?"

CALL BOYS

He turned to Dicky inquiringly and paused for an answer.

"I can't see anything the matter with it," Dicky replied. "How about it, Madge? Are you willing we should take the kids with us?"

"If I hadn't had confidence in your decision I never should have asked you to take them," I said quietly.

"Spoken like a good wife and true," Dicky said. "I have hopes of you yet. I'll have you asking 'is the world round?' before the leaves fall. But we'll 'leave that lie.' Just now, suppose you get the little boys down here."

I waited for no second adjuration but hurried up the stairs, where I found Junior and Roderick hanging over the banisters as near as they could get to the bounds of their "patrol."

"Come quickly, boys," I whispered. "Don't make any noise."

They tiptoed down, fairly holding their breath, for they knew as well as I that if their grandmother should see them she would demand where they were going; and when we explained to her, they would go out to investigate the white "something" on the fence only over her dead body.

Tell It to Sally

By SALLY MARTIN

Jealousy and Nasty Temper Kills Bravest Love

Wanta see a picture of a gentleman two-timing himself?

Then get in on this. It's all about a jealous hombre and the gal whose love is growing cold.

Yep. That's it. He loves her, but she's slipping away. And what is he doing about it? Is he trying to be such a good fellow—such an attractive, understanding chap—that he'll stack up like a million beside the rest of the men she knows?

Nope! Not he! What he is doing is rowing at her, accusing her and generally throwing a fit. All of which makes the lady look at him with a jaundiced eye and snort:

"Ugh! What a nasty temper you have!"

"But I can't help it," he moans, "because I love her!"

Is that your idea of the way to make 'em fall for you? Do you think you can hold love by snarling at it?

"Dear Sally:

"I am coming to you in desperation. Will you please tell me what to do?

"I met a girl where I work, and fell for her. We have been going together for a year and a half now. She is divorced, but she told me all about that and told me that she loved me. I believed everything that she told me. I brought her to my house and introduced her to my people, and I have seen her almost every night.

JEALOUS

"Now lately she has been going away every week end, to visit relatives, so she said.

"I am very jealous, and she has told me that I have a nasty disposition, but I can't help it, because I love her.

"I don't know what to do. Can you help me? Sometimes she has said things about breaking up, but she was only kidding, but now she has said that she has met someone else. I don't know what to do. I feel like running away, but I can't give up my job. I have to eat. Again, if she went with someone else, I wouldn't want her.

"I know she hasn't been out with anyone else since we have been going together, but now she has said that she is going to go. It has me all broken up. I have so many memories of her that I can't forget her. But she says it is all my own fault. What would you advise? J. G."

KILLING LOVE

What do I advise? I advise you to sit down and take a good, long look at yourself.

She is right when she says it is your own fault that she is sick of you. When you suspect her and accuse her and fly into temper tantrums, like a silly 2-year-old, why shouldn't she leave you? Would you keep on loving a person who acted as you say you have?

"But I can't help being jealous! I can't help showing my temper, because I love her!" you wail.

Oh, yeah? Well, young-fella-me-lad, if you expect any girl to stay fond of you, you'll have to help it. You have to be attractive to win love; and once you get it, you have to go on being attractive to keep it. You can't club it into staying by you; and jealousy and a nasty temper will kill the finest love on earth.

Think that over. Then go to this girl and ask her to give you another chance. And if she gives it to you, stop moaning about your feelings, and see how happy you can make her.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

One Pound in Week Is Fast as You Can Safely Reduce

Many a person worrying over increasing weight resorts to patent medicines and quack remedies to check the increase, without taking medical advice. It never enters his mind that he should consult a physician, so he continues habits that increase his weight and takes drugs that may undermine his health.

Dr. Copeland

I do not favor the rigorous dieting which I believe has become too much of a fad in recent years. There is apt to be danger in every fad. Foods that will be useful vary with each individual, hence a diet must be carefully prescribed that is exactly fitted to the given case, and this can be determined only after a thorough physical examination.

Thorough study of the heart and circulation is essential to discover the conditions of these organs and thus determine whether exercise can be prescribed, and how much can be taken without injury. High blood pressure calls for special attention, and if the blood pressure is abnormally low, rigid dieting may be dangerous.

The urine should be analyzed, and tested particularly for albumen and sugar. Let me impress upon my readers that diabetes is more frequently found in a person who is overweight than in a thin individual. In many cases blood analysis for sugar and protein waste products is important, because the urine may show no sugar, although there is actually an excessive amount in the blood.

A superabundance of flesh may be a sign of what the doctors call a metabolic disease, and if it is due to a disturbance in metabolism, it is advisable that a basal metabolic test be performed by the attending physician. This is a simple procedure giving definite and useful information and I will explain it in a later article.

After this test the condition may be properly treated by the use of certain medicines. In such a case thyroid substance may be given, but only under the supervision of a physician, for thyroid extracts are dangerous when used by inexperienced persons.

As a rule obesity is caused by excessive eating and reducing weight by controlling the appetite is the only safe procedure. Its only drawback is that it requires time and patience. Remember that reducing several pounds a week is a dangerous folly and that many serious complications result from this practice. A loss of one pound a week is sufficient and more should not be attempted.

You can make your start today and this may be the turning point in your fortune. It may be just the thing to turn depression into sunshine. The Sun-Telegraph has sponsored quite a number of cash prize distributions, but never at a time when a proposition of this kind was more welcome. The Movie Lovers' Contest gives readers of this newspaper an opportunity to share in a $2,500 prize distribution, 148 prizes in all, and at the same time furnishes a pastime that will create a lot of real fun for the next few weeks.

If you "know your movies," you have a chance to win as high as $500. What a sock this sum is going to give "Old Man Depression." The list also includes prizes as high as $250, $175, $125, $100, three at $75, seven at $50, 16 at $25, 16 at $15 and so on until the entire $2,500 is distributed.

Turn to the contest pictures in today's Sun-Telegraph. In the "Want Ad" section you will find a list of popular motion picture titles. Select what you think would be the correct titles for each of today's pictures and you may find yourself on your way to fortune. In the meantime, be sure to send in the registration blank printed in the same announcement with the contest pictures.

'DREAM HOME' HELD MARVEL IN DESIGN

Decorative Art Interior In American Style Shows Good Taste With Economy

By PENELOPE REDD

Goldilocks' discovery of the marvelous completeness of the house of the three bears would pale beside the surprise awaiting visitors to the "Dream Home" in Seminole Hills, Mt. Lebanon.

When the owners-to-be walk into their new home, built of native field stone and white clapboard in a typical American design, everything will be complete.

Meanwhile Miss Grace Ely, director of the Retail Bureau of the University of Pittsburgh, is working feverishly to produce an agreeable American interior at a minimum cost in a brief time.

MODERN PLAYROOM

Right off one finds provision for that newest American institution, a playroom, and its accompanying "powder room." Contemporary metal tubular furniture and a swagger sofa in tangerine are the particular decorative stars of this unit.

To balance this informality, the living room is given the dignity of a drawingroom. Establishing a color ensemble of jade green and rust, excellent furniture sustains the color plan in composing a room for repose or quiet recreation.

One of the bedrooms is done in orchid, green and peach with a finesse as to detail that will be of great help to many who study the plan. The other bedroom is certainly the one that Goldilocks would have chosen. It promises to be an enchanting essay inspired by a provincial chair with red chintz cushions. Maple furniture, amber glass, beige organdy and Washington's blue and red play ring-around-the-rosy in this cozy room.

SUNLIGHT KITCHEN

Sunlight is used as the color motif of the bathroom in curtains and accessories. The kitchen is in orange and green which would have tempted Goldilocks to scramble an egg for the sake of completing the color theme.

While only one family will enjoy permanently the fruits of Miss Ely's discrimination, the "Dream Home" will demonstrate beyond doubt to all visitors that good taste is not dependent upon lavish expenditure. Miss Ely has done a good job in showing what decorative art may attain regardless of economic handicap.

County to Let Out 62 in Tax Office

County Commissioners this afternoon moved to drop 62 employes in the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes to effect a total annual saving of $132,182. The action will be effective June 15. The motion was made by Charles C. McGovern, chairman, and passed unanimously.

TUBE COST BILL HELD ILLEGAL

Failure of the County Commissioners to notify the city formally of completion of the Armstrong Tunnels prohibits the Department of Public Works from assuming a bill for $52,000 for maintenance and policing of the tubes since they were opened, City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt ruled today.

The bill was "discovered" during an audit of the county records several months ago, Waldschmidt said.

Councilman W. Y. English moved the County Commissioners be informed of the legal department's action and Council await a reply before taking further action.

PRISON VISITED BY ENGELSBERG

Joseph Engelsberg, Hill district politician recently released from the county jail where he spent six months for a liquor law violation conviction, didn't find life there so drab he wouldn't go back for a visit, it was learned today.

Released on May 16, Engelsberg went to the jail again a week ago — but this time just to see how Harvey Murray, who succeeded him as jail librarian, was coming along with the work.

Engelsberg during his term was instrumental in building up the library from a few tattered books until it now totals 2,000 volumes.

Murray, his former assistant, reported steady calls for all the books with Dickens, Kipling and others of the older writers enjoying the preference over the works of modernists.

FIREMAN KILLED AT W. HOMESTEAD BLAZE

House, Barn Levelled by Fire's Sweep in Homestead

FOUR CHILDREN SAVED BY LEAPS

Toppling Bricks Fatal to Volunteer; Father Hurt As He Jumps to Safety

A volunteer fireman was fatally injured and four children jumped to safety from a roof when fire destroyed their house and barn at the rear of 646 Doyle avenue, West Homestead, early today.

Fireman Steven Rubincsak, Jr., 20, of 533 West Eighth avenue, West Homestead, was warning others to flee from the range of a weakened chimney when the bricks toppled down on him. He died a few hours later in Homestead Hospital.

Mr. Rubincsak

Smoke throughout the 3-story frame house house awakened John Pawlysyon and his wife. They rushed to the street.

Pawlysyon returned to the flaming house, awakened his four children and led them to the kitchen roof. From there they jumped to the yard, the mother helping them to break the fall.

The father wrenched his side in jumping. Three of the children are his stepchildren. They are Margaret Davis, 15; Juliana Davis, 5, and Andrew Davis, 10, and the fourth, John Pawlysyon, Jr., 3.

Sparks from the house ignited the barn and soon it, too, was in ruins.

Pawlysyon's small garden also was ruined. He has been idle for two months.

POLITICS

Vare Doesn't Expect To Attend Convention

—By MARK SHIELDS—

William S. Vare does not expect to attend the Republican National Convention. Elected a delegate-at-large, and chosen as chairman of the Pennsylvania delegation, he has become convinced that his health will not permit the trip to Chicago. He has come to this decision reluctantly, holding out for some time against the advice of his physician and family.

Mr. Shields

Vare's place as delegate probably will be taken by Marion L. Pyle, Philadelphia, an alternate, who was put on the slate by Vare for just such a contingency as has arisen. She is a loyal follower of the Philadelphia boss, and successfully led the fight in the last primary against former Mayor Harry A. Mackey, who was seeking a seat in the Legislature.

In fact, she paraded this victory so resonantly at the meeting of the Republican State Committee in Philadelphia last month that State Chairman Edward Martin reproved her in a scene which caused somewhat of a commotion.

Martin will act as chairman of the delegation in place of Vare, as well as serve as Pennsylvania's member of the national committee as a substitute for Jay Cooke, who is too ill to attend. Martin leaves for Chicago tonight, and will sit in the national committee meeting tomorrow.

The absence of Vare removes a figure prominent in the convention of four years ago in Kansas City. It will be recalled that as soon as the Pennsylvania delegation detrained in the western city the Philadelphia boss gave out a statement favoring Herbert Hoover, thus determining the trend of the Pennsylvanians at a time when A. W. Mellon thought he had the situation well in hand and was holding back to make the adherence announcement himself as chairman of the delegation when—and if—he decided it should be done.

Strange Convention To Pennsylvanians

Vare's precipitate announcement angered Senator David A. Reed and the Mellon contingent, but it earned the Philadelphian a place in the national spotlight. There were observations at the time that Vare hoped as reciprocity he would have some help from Hoover in retaining his Senate seat, but that hope was fruitless.

It will be a strange convention to Pennsylvanians with neither a Vare nor a Mellon present.

The presence yesterday of National Committeeman Sedgwick Kistler and former State Chairman John Collins at the gathering in New York of Democrats favorable to Al Smith indicates there will be a last-ditch fight by some Pennsylvanians in behalf of the 1928 candidate or some likely Democrat picked by him as an opponent of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt in the convention.

Collins was routed by the Roosevelt forces in the organization of the Democratic State Committee last month. Kistler, however, was re-elected without a fight, though he was as intense a Smith partisan as Collins. The Kistler-Collins forces insist that Roosevelt will not have more than 45 votes from Pennsylvania on the first ballot.

Against this prophecy is the assertion of Joseph F. Guffey, Roosevelt leader in this state, that the New York Governor will have a minimum of 61, "if he needs them." This qualification is understood to include six delegates from Allegheny County, friendly to Roosevelt, but elected in districts where Smith received the larger popular vote in the primary.

It is probable there will be much negotiating and conferring on the ultimate destination of the Pennsylvania delegates when leaders of all factions come together in Chicago several days ahead of the convention.

Reed's Liquor Plan Reported Approved

Some prominent Republican members of the Senate and House are hoping Congress will not adjourn before the convention, now that prohibition has become the paramount issue, and the way to straddling has been beset with difficulties. Since John D. Rockefeller, Jr., declared for prohibition repeal they are more eager than ever to avoid taking a stand in the platform fight.

Senator Reed's suggestion for resubmission, and a plan for liquor control by states as a guarantee against return of the saloons, outlined in this column yesterday, is reported from the East to have received the approval of the "Pennsylvania and Philadelphia Republican organizations."

I can find no evidence that such assurance has been given by any delegates from Allegheny County. The majority here favor resubmission through an orderly process, but they insist that with this resubmission shall be an expression of complete disapproval of prohibition, together with a pledge to seek modification of the Volstead act pending action by the various states.

A mere gesture of resubmission, even though it carries an alternate plan, will not be sufficient for Allegheny countians unless more than one of them is now using language which he later will repudiate. And that, on the records of the men, as well as their public pronouncements, is not conceivable.

There must be a condemnation clause in any expression on prohibition to meet their demands. If that is eliminated it would not be surprising to see them fighting on the floor alongside of Nicholas Murray Butler and other national wets for their principles.

LEAGUE SHOWS GREAT RELIEF CRISIS HERE

$17,000 Held Needed to Aid County's 83,000 Fundless Families; Changes Urged

More than 83,000 families in Allegheny County are without current income, and the average of $4.50 a week relief for each dependent family is hopelessly inadequate—the minimum should be $15, the League for Social Justice stated last night in a committee report.

More than $17,000,000 is needed to adequately meet the need in the county, the committee estimates.

Condemning the policy of relief organizations, concerning evictions, and presenting a picture of inadequate relief, the committee, headed by Dr. Ralph S. Boots, of the University of Pittsburgh, reported:

"The community's precious resource, family and home life, is rapidly being destroyed.

"The breakdown of individual integrity and character and the disappearance of hope are the inevitable results of the destruction of family life."

Prior to the discussion of the report, in which the Rev. Dr. Albert E. Day, pastor of Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Goldenson and others participated, Dr. Day spoke of the need of a fact-finding and fact-presenting organization such as the League. He challenged the system under which we lived in 1929, and now saying that it was inherently wrong and that there should be a group with a conviction that the intolerable character of the present system in which we live must be changed and with a conviction of the injustices and inhumanities of that order or system.

He said:

"I had hoped, as the depression continued, that the expert economists would bring forward some conclusions on which the new order could be built; that these economists would lose their timidity and speak out and give us something we could discuss.

"But they are a great disappointment, and only one I have read has said anything striking, and that was that we didn't know what we wanted. He said they were not thinking in terms of totality, but of individual industries.

"These should be overwhelmed with facts, showing the system with its unjust distribution, built on the basis of profit, without claim on human life."

CITY PAYROLL SAVINGS SHORT $101,450

Furlough Plan Difficulties Blamed by Alderdice for Failure to Attain Goal

Savings made in the salaries appropriations schedule for city employes for the first five months of 1932 have amounted to $243,550, as against the designated requirement of $345,000, or a difference of $101,450, Budget Controller Robert J. Alderdice revealed today.

The shortage is due to the fact, Alderdice pointed out in a report, that a number of city employes have not taken their full furloughs, ordered by City Council last January. Each employe will be required to take one month off without pay before the end of the year. A number have been taking one week without pay each quarter. Alderdice said he hoped the schedules would balance before next December.

He said:

"In three appropriations the amount of required savings that has not been reached amounts to $101,715, furloughs in the other salary appropriations as a whole, having been adequate. One of these appropriations is for police, where the shortage in the required savings is $59,295; another is in the Bureau of Fire, with a shortage in the required savings, of $36,130, while the third is at the Mayview Home and Hospital, where the shortage is $6,290.

"The apparent shortage in the furlough savings in the police and fire bureaus is to a large extent accounted for by the difficulties in arranging a system of furloughs for the large number of men employed in these bureaus, and particularly in view of the elimination of positions."

SHOW PIPE LINE BLUNDER NOTE

The Ortale Construction Company, which installed the gasoline lines at the County Airport, has furnished County Commissioners with a copy of a letter from E. G. Kaltenbach, former county engineer, authorizing them to lay the lines outside the conduits when it was found the sleeves would not permit them to go inside.

Kaltenbach is no longer with the county. Recently he has been connected with the subway and the Wabash Bridge and tunnel proposals.

A report from the present County Engineering Department on the broken pipe line shows that an area over the break was graded for a runway and only a thin layer of earth placed over the pipes. In one case, a clam shell bucket damaged the pipes.

Pittsburgh Coal Co. Mines Picketed

Miners of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation who quit work a week ago in protest of a 10 per cent wage cut were led by a "rank and file" committee of 24 members yesterday in picketing mines of the Pittsburgh Coal Company.

Four hundred pickets lined both sides of the Sandy Fork road at Library, urging men employed at the Montour No. 10 mine to join in the walkout, while 10 deputy sheriffs kept order.

62 MORE FACE COUNTY AX

County Commissioners have announced that 62 employes will be dropped in the various divisions of the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes, effective June 15. Numerous salary reductions also have been made.

Saving in a year as a result of the eliminations and reductions is estimated at $132,182. Names of those whose positions have been eliminated have not yet been announced, but 26 employes are to be dropped from the transcribing department, four from the transfer department and 36 from the assessors.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., June 8.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Got a new suggestion for presidential candidate. Found a prominent man who can make up his mind. This fellow Rockefeller jumped right out of the Sunday school room into the hearts of his countrymen with the most plain, straightforward and lucid statement that's been issued on prohibition. Even the rabid drys will applaud his honesty and frankness. Come to think it, this fellow would make us a fine President, if we could persuade him to take over a little small, run-down outfit like ours.

Yours, WILL.

Miss Cleta Gallagher, North Side marathon dancer at Motor Square Garden, danced despite a swollen jaw early today while another participant, Elsie Campbell, of Butler street, dropped out as the endurance test passed the 24-hour mark. Miss Campbell, a partner of Edward Carter, of Sharpsburg, was sent home by a physician.

COUNTY AGAIN HOLDS UP BILLS

In spite of a direct personal appeal from Judges Richard A. Kennedy and Sara M. Soffel, of County Court, for the payment of outstanding bills contracted for the wards of Juvenile Court, County Commissioners have again deferred payment pending legal advice.

The position taken by the Commissioners is that the money was spent illegally in that the goods were bought without competitive bidding, and that if the board approves the bill it may be liable to a surcharge.

Unpaid bills amount to approximately $3,000. Payment was stopped May 7 when the Commissioners were warned they might be held liable for illegal expenditure.

'Bugs' Suggests Pretzel With Gallon of Gas

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Our stein of joy runneth over.

Did you read John D. Jr.'s, epistle to the Saharans?

It was a pip. We read it through. Then we read it backwards. Finally, we started in the middle and worked both ways.

The junior Rockefeller is for beer for the workingman and will soon advocate a pretzel with every gallon of gasoline.

He never took a drink in his life. Neither did his father. That's just as well. At the age of ten we rushed the growler for our old man. And all we got was the foam.

Later in life, we tried to make up for the disappointments of childhood. Our idea of moderation was one headache powder a morning.

So you see that both the prosecution and defense are for good beer.

Mr. Rockefeller's statement is the finish of the rabid drys. More power to him. And a toast to the Standard Beer of New Jersey.

SKYSCRAPER -:- -:- By FAITH BALDWIN

CHAPTER I.

Midtown, in Manhattan, the Seacoast Building rose steadily in a series of sculptured setbacks for more than 800 feet, to challenge the imagination, to utter the most recent but probably not the last word in structural engineering. From the lowest caisson, anchored on rock, to the final soaring tower, incredible masses of steel and stone had been shaped into a pattern of progress, into a concrete expression of man's upward striving.

Here, upon this site, not many months ago, a group of brick buildings, irregular and dingy, had stood. They had been demolished, vanishing into dust. Then had come an ordered confusion: earth ripped open; earth in a long travail; earth in the preparatory throes of deliverance of a monster.

Enamored of the ant-like activities of swarming workmen, the crowds had stood watching hour upon hour the heavy open jaws of the steam shovels digging their relentless way through earth to quicksand and running water, through quicksand and running water to the mammoth, the dinosaurian bones of solid rock.

Men. Architects, engineers, contractors, job hunters, timekeepers, marble setters, ironworkers, carpenters, plasterers, masons, painters, glaziers. And back of them, invisible, the forests, the quarries, the mills and the kilns.

Noise. The cacophonous hymn attending these Gargantuan rites, from the bell signals to the donkey engines from the clatter of tools to the machine-gun staccato of the riveting gun. Two thousand workmen, a dozen languages; tools of all trades; laughter; profanity.

Skyscraper—not so many months ago.

Now, the workmen have vanished.

Now, the finished building stands; soon the public wonder will concentrate on other miracles. Now the sight-seeing buses make a detour so that the visitors to Manhattan may view the tallest building in town. "On your right, ladies and gentlemen, the Seacoast Building, 842 feet high, 72 stories, the home of the Seacoast Bank and Trust Company, of the United Broadcasting Company. Hundreds of offices; thousands of workers. On your right, ladies and gentlemen."

A historian, passing by on foot, looks up. He is dizzy with looking up. Is there no end to this building, which to his restricted and tortured vision appears to lean, perilously balanced? Craning his thin neck, while the building slants above him, he thinks of the lost zikkurats of Babylon.

From Jersey, a sight-seeing airplane soars over Manhattan and skims like a silver dragon fly high above the tallest tower of the Seacoast Building. The guide murmurs his lesson: "We are now passing over the Seacoast Building."

The passengers in the plane look down. They see a finger pointing into the sky; they see a pinnacle falling leagues short of its arrogant endeavor. They see a pyramid, built with the blocks placed one upon another, setback, step-off.

They see something small and aspiring, lifting itself above the striving of other buildings yet never attaining that blue height which their pilot, chewing gum, his hand easy upon the stick, attains. They feel confident and secure. They look down upon this insolence of steel, and it is dwarfed. They are above it.

It is all in the point of view.

On Sundays the street is empty. Now and then a car goes by. Now and then a man walks past, talking to his companion. The Seacoast Building stands half in sun and half in

FULL RECORDS TO HALT VOTE FRAUDS URGED

Meyers Proposes County Agency to Balk Padding; McGovern Scores Judges

A new department should be organized to make a permanent record of the voters of Allegheny County to prevent election frauds in so far as the padding of registration lists is concerned, according to the recommendation of George E. Meyers, chairman of the Board of Assessment and Revision of Taxes, in a report to County Commissioners.

Commissioner Charles C. McGovern [illegible] criticized the prosecuting authorities and the judiciary, which he declared was lax in bringing to justice election law violators, saying:

"As long as the judiciary of the county and the prosecuting authorities belittle the public officials and private citizens who appear at the hearings, I suppose we will have to levy taxes to pay for these investigations. Every citizen should work to make elections decent."

FOUNDATION CITED

The foundation of the permanent record of voters suggested by Meyers, reports the data recorded in the recent special investigation, together with names being recorded in the assessment of the poll tax.

The report touches on irregularities in registry in various districts. In the first district of the First Ward of McKees Rocks at the last registration there were 1,246 names while the new registry book shows only 474.

REGISTRATION CUT

The report notes that in the Fourth District of Wilmerding, where a number of names were struck off by court order, the registration last year was 813 but the new registration book shows only 569 names.

On the North Side the report says that in the Twenty-first Ward, in which William A. Hern is chairman, there are 113 persons registered from eight residential locations in his immediate neighborhood. Some of these places are rooming houses, the report declares.

Crash Hurls Woman Through Windshield

Thrown through the windshield of an automobile truck on which she was a passenger, Susie Snazel, 27, of 44 Bison street, was treated for lacerations in St. John's Hospital early today. The truck collided with a girder on Verner Bridge. Robert Hintzman, 35, of 2429 Carson street, driver, was charged with reckless driving.

Three men were treated at Mercy Hospital for injuries suffered early today when the automobile of John Ladsic, 30, of 17 Freeport street, Etna, and W. J. Rettenour, 32, of 1614 Lincoln avenue, collided at Diamond and Smithfield streets. The third man was George Kurtzrock, 25, of 30 Minterwood street, Etna. The drivers were charged with reckless driving.

MRS. WALKER FIGHTS DIVORCE

A Mother's Day battle last year climaxed five years of wedded life for John L. Walker of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association and Mary Jackson Walker of 200 Richland lane, Walker testified today before Judge T. M. Marshall in divorce court. Mrs. Walker was bookkeeper for her husband when they were married August 19, 1926. They separated May 11, 1931, Walker taking his two daughters, Mary, 15, a Winchester school student, and Helen, 20, a P. C. W. student, to the home of relatives.

He charged his wife abused him, called him a "sap" and at the governor's ball at Richmond, Va., in 1927, caused a scene on the dance floor and forced him to leave.

Mrs. Walker, contesting the divorce, said many of their differences were due to his two daughters by a former marriage. She also alleged her husband struck her.

TUBE MONOXIDE SAFEGUARDS PROPOSED

Maits Urges Alarm System And Emergency Car to Overcome Tunnel Menace

A report on gas conditions in the Liberty Tubes has been filed with County Commissioners by Dr. C. B. Maits, of the City Department of Public Health, and indicates that during traffic jams there is a sufficient accumulation of carbon monoxide to be a menace.

An emergency car with tow rope and fire-fighting apparatus should be installed at each end of the tunnel, Dr. Maits recommends. He suggests an alarm system be installed in case of a breakdown of a car in the tunnel and that a fee be charged for the towing service.

A minimum speed for cars passing through the tubes should be 25 miles per hour, the report says. Carbon monoxide indicators should be placed in each tube and the speed of the fans regulated according to the carbon monoxide reading, thus saving operation costs in light traffic periods, it is suggested.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 8.—Some day I hope to write a slim brochure which, for want of better title, might be called "A Brief Introduction to Restaurants Nobody Knows." The diner-out in New York submits to herd instinct. He eats where the crowd eats, overlooking humble spots, clogged with culinary generosities.

Now and then I find myself at Gansmeyer's down town, an old world auberge, where roast goose is the piece de resistance. There are seldom more than a handful of dinner guests. Service is leisurely and a former proprietor, rich and retired, acts as headwaiter.

Arakel's is an Armenian cafe on Lexington avenue, having the same waiters for years, and few customers. There are olive-skinned ladies, old smugmugs with beards — all conversing quietly and puffing innumerable gold-tipped cigarets. Meats are confined to chicken and lamb in many-splendored versions.

The dessert is a honeyed bread with a heavenly roll of especially prepared cream. Del Pezzo's, a stone's cast from the Metropolitan, was where Caruso forked after-opera spaghetti, and has the charm of obscurity. An upper Broadway lunch wagon is where many hungry rich go for midnight hamburger.

Moneta's, far down in the rabble that is Mulberry street, is distinctly for the gourmand, expressing a pregnant spirit of solicitude. Also Chili Villa with fiery fare on West Forty-ninth. And a ship captain's cafe at the foot of Fulton where a famous financier indulges various adventures in platonic noblesse.

Save for Luchow's, which carries on with near-Wurzburger, there are few mellow German restaurants left—the dark-timbered sort with huge orchestras rendering Viennese airs. In other years they thickened around the section "Dead Man's Curve," the Union Square district. Here were Brubacher's Wine Garden, Lienau's, Cafe Hungaria, Alhambra Gardens and many others. James Huneker gave Luchow's undying publicity in "Steeplejack." And F. Hopkinson Smith beglamoured it in his early novel, "Peter."

A critic recently spoke of them as "shadow sitters." They are former celebrities of the stage who come late to first nights and depart before the final curtain. Every opening has a sprinkle of them. They like to hear the roar of applause that once echoed for them.

In a huddle in one of the sun-up sandwich parlors, a boulevardier was discussing the vicious scandal mongers who so often smash reputations. Looking across the room, he said: "There's one of those birds now." And the dour and worldly Jack Lait murmured: "A carrion—drunk with pus!"

* * *

The same group recalled figures of the Broadway pageant of 20 years ago. It was agreed the flashiest actress of that period was the Junoesque Valeska Suratt. She was a striking beauty and first to drape herself in clinging velvet gowns and enormous picture hat against a back-drop of rhinestones. No other woman of the stage had her flair for the bizarre in clothes. Wilson Mizner, in beholding the lobby of the Paramount movie the first time, exploded: "It's Valeska Suratt cut open."

* * *

The Sealyham is on strike. Out of a clear sky—well, there might have been a patch of cloud Jerseyward— he walked a half block, sat down and refused to budge. This has been going on 10 days now. Henry Sell suggests he may feel he's merely in a rut—tired of the hum drum, the same old sidewalks and buildings.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

"Let Us Be Gay"

Everybody loves a cheer-leader—and just now, most of us need one.

I never was strong for the Pollyanna school of philosophy, or the "Smile, Smile, Smile" songs. But, I think that, if the good fairy had offered to grant me just one wish, I should have asked to be gifted at birth with AMIABILITY! Gaiete de coeur!

* * *

Platinum hair, a tip-tilted nose and a talent for acting might come next, but a ready laugh, a radiant, spontaneous smile and a light-hearted, cheerful nature would came first.

Amiability is the royal road to popularity. And to love, friendship and an easy life. It brings the biggest returns for the least effort.

Many a girl who might have had to spend her days at a desk or behind a shop-counter, has gone through life in an imported car and sable, just because God blessed her with a winning smile. A warm, radiant, irresistible smile. There is no other charm so potent! Or so lasting!

* * *

All of us must have our little cheer leader in this life, just as flowers must have sun. One of these makes us blossom, and warms our hearts clear down to the roots.

Smiling amiability is the first law of courtesy and good breeding. The frigid soul who listens to your airy persiflage with that "I-dare-you-to-make-me-laugh" expression is mentally high-hatting you. It may reduce your vanity and deflate your conceit; but it doesn't endear him to you.

That's one reason why most men prefer good-natured little lowbrows to brilliant, intellectual woman. A goose that cackles cheerfully is more comfortable to have around that an owl that hoots derisively. The clever girl, who just waits patiently for a man to get through talking, as she would wait for the band to go by, and then springs her own bright remark, doesn't dazzle him—she dashes him! Or bores him, or irritates him!

Oh yes, amiability, good-nature and cheerfulness are charms that never fade. The most effective face-lift in the world is a radiant, whole-hearted smile. EVERYBODY loves a cheer-leader—and everybody NEEDS one! It's not a sign of a weak mind to be gay and cheerful. It's the sign of a strong heart!

Strikingly, Radically New
Phantom* Kotex
SANITARY NAPKIN (U. S. Pat. No. 1,857,854)

Most important improvement in sanitary protection since the invention of Kotex itself in 1920.

AT LAST! A radically new design in sanitary protection. You are scarcely aware that you have it on. Made, of course, by Kotex—originators of the modern sanitary napkin.

It is called PHANTOM * KOTEX. Why? Because the ends are so flattened and tapered that it leaves no outlines even under the closest-fitting of gowns. Not the slightest bulk suggested even under the filmiest of summer silks. And—for those who require extra protection— Super-Phantom Kotex is ideal. There's extra protective surface but the ends are so skilfully flattened as to be completely inconspicuous.

Kotex features retained

The special Kotex features you have always appreciated are retained, of course. It is soft after hours of use, wonderfully absorbent; treated to deodorize, can be worn, with equal protection, on either side; disposable, easily.

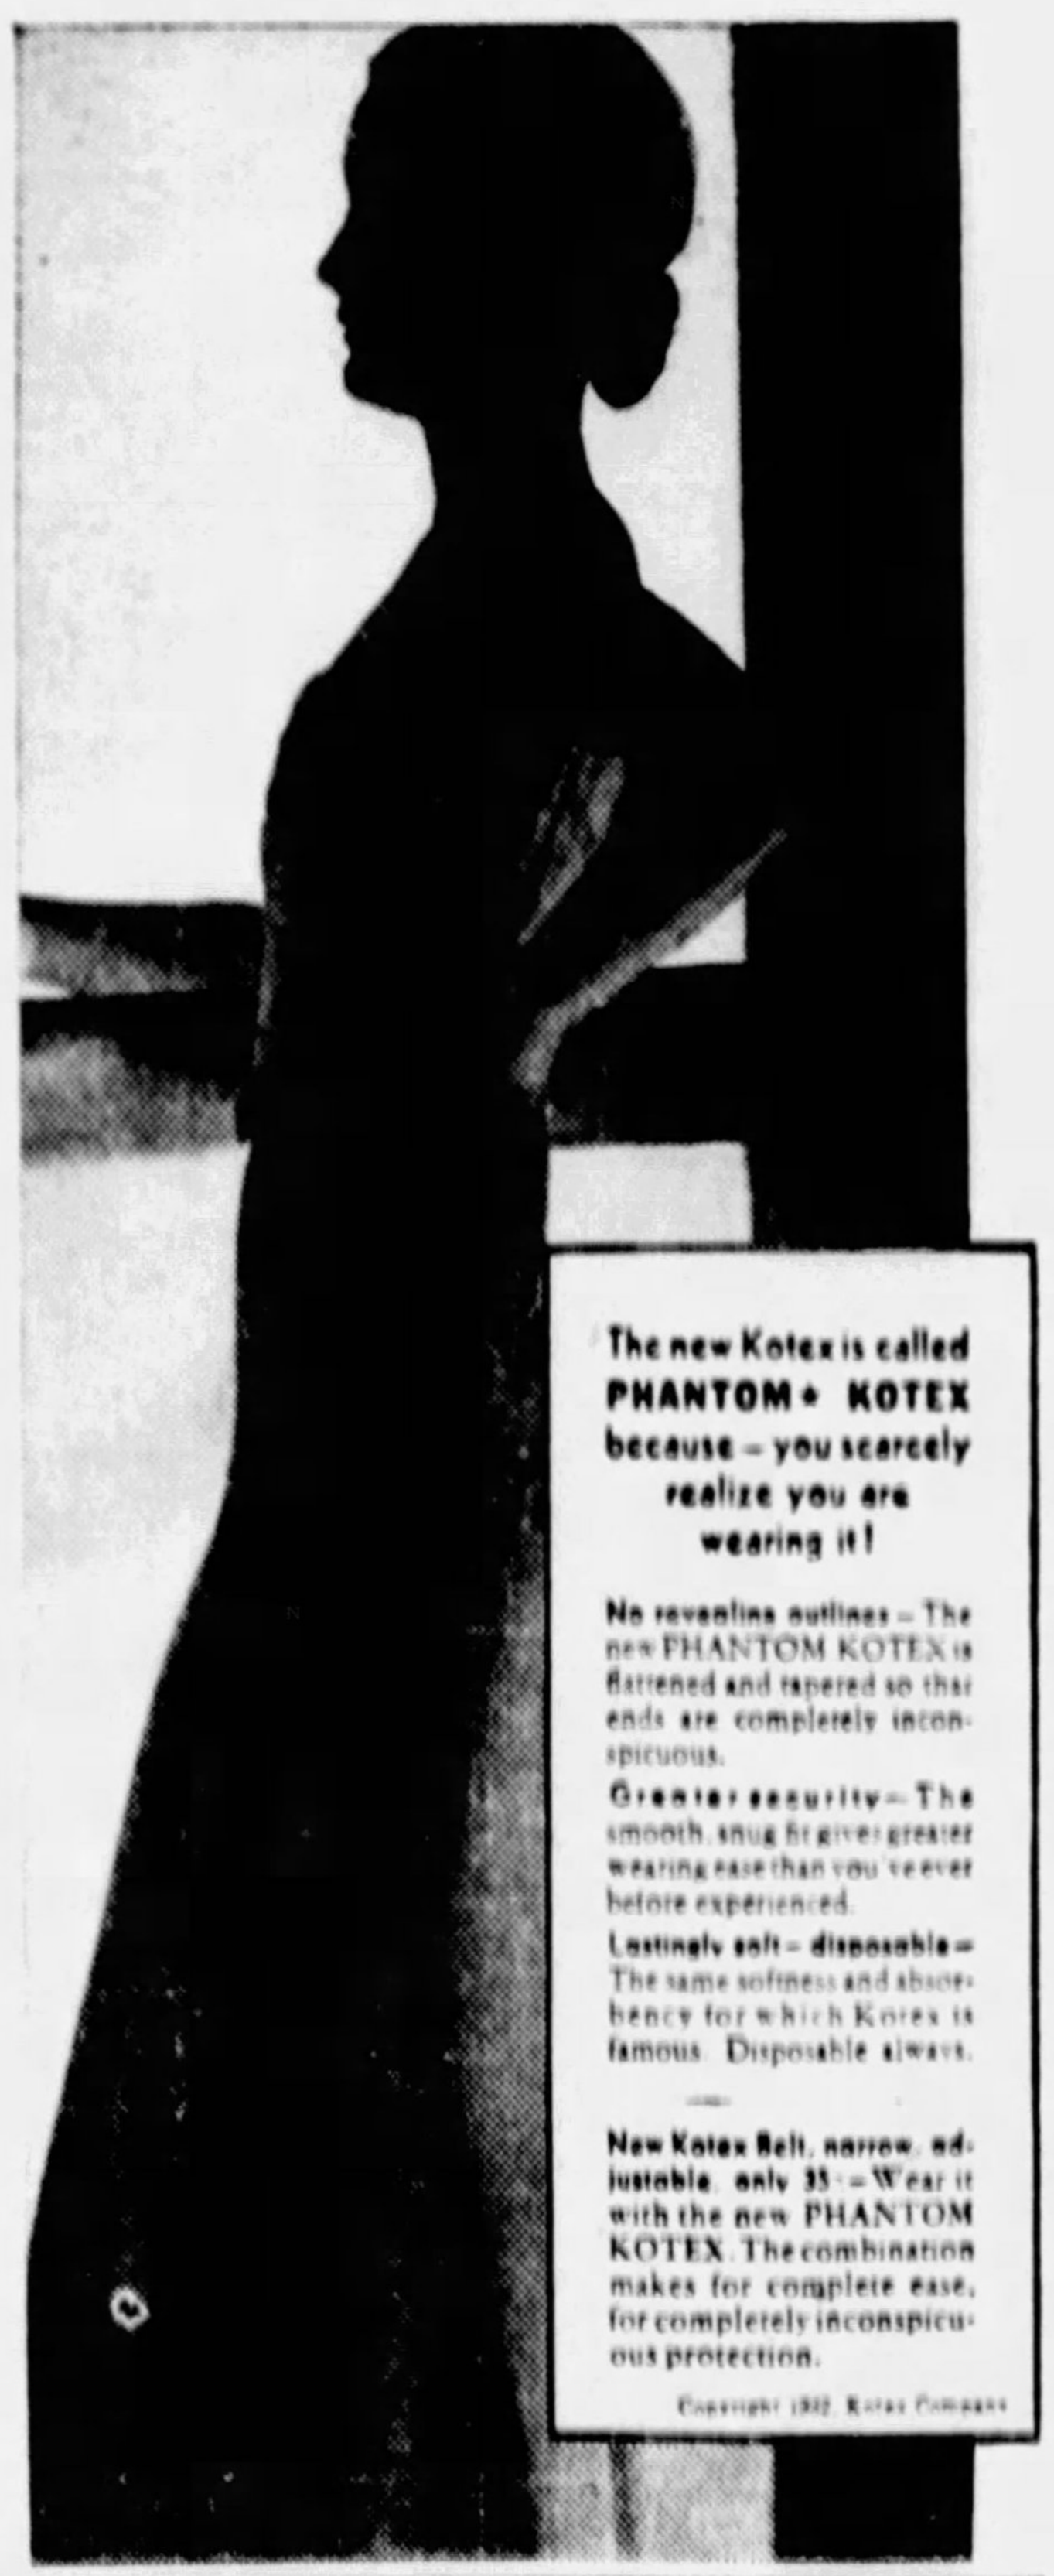
Insist upon getting genuine Kotex, when you buy it already wrapped. Each tapered end of the new pad is stamped "Kotex" now—so you can't get inferior substitutes.

Kotex prices are today the lowest in Kotex history. This new improvement comes to you at no increase in price. All dealers have the new PHANTOM KOTEX.

HOW SHALL I TELL MY DAUGHTER?
Many a mother wonders. Now you simply hand your daughter the little booklet entitled, "Marjorie May's Twelfth Birthday." For free copy, address Mary Pauline Callender, Room 2140, 180 North Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.



The new Kotex is called PHANTOM* KOTEX because—you scarcely realize you are wearing it!

No revealing outlines—The new PHANTOM KOTEX is flattened and tapered so that ends are completely inconspicuous.

Lastingly soft—disposable—The same softness and absorbency for which Kotex is famous. Disposable always.

BANDITS LOOT GAS STATION

Allen Hill of Export, night attendant of the Sun Oil Company service station, Baum boulevard and Negley avenue, was forced into the washroom early today while two bandits escaped with $15 from the cash register.

Walter Hillman, of 307 Itaska street, reported to detectives today that thieves had stolen a battery valued at $7 and a tire worth $19 from his automobile, parked in the rear of 307 Cremo street.

Cigarets valued at $20 and $8 cash were stolen from the home of Ray Foreman, 2130 Rose street, he reported to Hill district police.

Fall After Stroke Causes Man's Death

George Lindrum, 65, of Nelson road, Ross Township, died yesterday in his home from a fractured skull suffered when he fell from a porch, according to a morgue report. A stroke of apoplexy caused Lindrum to fall.

BRICKCONTRACT TRICK CHARGED

The brick contract for the Broad street extension to the Ohio River boulevard and the Sewickley-Coraopolis Bridge approach has been held up by County Commissioners until a charge of "trick specifications" has been investigated.

F. C. Mayer, Bridgeville brick manufacturer, in a letter to commissioners, told them that the fire clay brick specified in the contract could not be made in Allegheny County and would have to come from West Virginia.

Mayer manufactures a shale brick, a variety which, according to county engineers, is not the equal of clay brick. County Commissioners have ordered further investigation by the engineers.

War Buddies Together Again

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, June 7.—Those two cinema buckaroos, Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen, are to be reunited at last.

One-time teammates at the Fox studio, they will make their return at Paramount, where they have just signed to play in the mystery melodrama "Riddle Me This."

If reports be true, this thriller is one of the best of the current Broadway crop. It is from the typewriter of Dan Rubin and the scenario will be the joint work of Percy Heath and Arthur Kober.

Edmund Lowe

Negotiations for the return of Ed and Vic were carried on by telegraph as the pair have been making personal appearances in Detroit.

You film fans will recall that "Women of All Nations" was the last picture the two stars appeared in at Fox. They were slated for "Disorderly Conduct" but were unable to agree with the studio on salary.

Over at the Biltmore Theater here the cast of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" is thick with English accents.

They tell a story that a certain Hollywood producer (he's not Irish) came out into the lobby shaking his head.

"What's the matter?" asked a friend. "Don't you like the show?"

"Do I like it?" he shrugged. "I can't understand it."

"'Smatter? Seat bad?"

"Vunderful seats," said the producer, "second row."

"Well, then, what is it?"

"I ask you," groaned the producer, "who can understand such a dialect?"

WHAT GOSSIPS SAY

The Warner Brothers studio will shut up shop during the month of July. They're 20 pictures ahead and plan to start nine more in August . . . Gilda Gray has been dancing these nights, not professionally, at the Frolics . . . Joan Blondell never wears new shoes.

BITS OF LIFE All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Passing Through

ONE EARLY morning, the boy took his mother aside.

"Mom," he said. "I'm leaving."

Her eyes opened wide.

"Leaving," she repeated. "But where are you going? And why?"

"I'm going down to New York," he replied. "I know I can get a good job down there and I feel that I'll get along all right. And, mom, I'm never coming back to this town again as long as my step-father is alive."

The boy hesitated for a moment. Then he drew his mother close to him and spoke more rapidly.

"I love you more than anything in the entire world, mom. But as much as I love you, just that much do I hate the man you married after pop died. Oh, I know why you did it originally. You did it to help raise me and give me a decent education. I know full well that you did it far more for security than you did for love. I—"

"You shouldn't speak that way, John," interrupted his mother. "Your step-father has been wonderful to me. I know he loves me, and you don't know how it hurt when I learned that you two were never going to be able to get along. Won't you make just one more try, John?"

Her son shook his head determinedly.

"No, mom, it's no use. The more I try, the worse the situation becomes. Sometimes I really grow afraid of myself. I look at him and I find my fists clenching in an instinctive gesture. I know that some day, if I remained, I would kill him.

"You took him in when I was a baby in order to protect me. Now that I'm of age, I'm leaving in order to protect you. Believe me, mom, it's by far the better way.

"It's got to be done, and I want you to help me do it right. I'll write often—and maybe, when I am settled, I'll find some way to see you every now and then. But as far as coming back here is concerned—well, that's out. When I leave this town, I'm never coming back."

He held her tightly. His voice broke slightly.

"I love you, mom," he said. "You — you understand, don't you?"

The woman's body was shaking. But her voice was steadier than her son's.

"Yes, son," she replied. "I understand. And may God bless you and keep you well." . . .

John found a job in New York City. I hasten to tell you that that was several years ago, so that you may believe me when I state that somebody found a job in New York. His position was with the city office of a large dairy farm upstate, and his salary was $25 a week. The first letter he wrote his mother contained the glowing news that he was earning $50, with fine prospects of a raise in the immediate future.

There was a reason for the lie. He knew his mother would show that letter to all the neighbors, and he felt it would make her very proud to tell the town how well her boy was doing. More, it would unquestionably burn his step-father to learn that the boy he hated was advancing so rapidly. All in all, then, it was a lie that could accomplish nothing but good.

As time rolled by there were periods that were pretty tough for the boy. But his mother never knew about them. His letters told her that he had been raised to $100 a week and that the firm now considered him one of its most valuable employes. True, he had been raised. But only as far as $30 a week.

At Christmas, and on her birthday, there were always gifts from her boy. And rather costly little gifts, too. Having begun this bluff to make his mother happy, it was up to him to follow through. And that's exactly what he did, even though he had to pay $6 a week to that loan society right through the year.

Twice, on tours of inspection to the dairy farm, John had the thrill of seeing his mother. To reach the farm from the city it was necessary to pass through John's home town. He wired his mother on each occasion, and there she was at the station as the train raced past.

Just a hurried waving and a blown kiss. That was all. But it was at least something. And John had kept his oath that he would never again set foot in his home town while the other man was alive. Silly, of course. But that's the way the boy felt. And who are we to tell him no? . . .

A letter came to John one morning. It was from his mother, and a small portion is all I will have to quote:

"And so, dear son, I am terribly worried. Your step-father is ill and if I cannot get the $2,000 before the first of next month we stand in danger of losing our home. I am not growing any younger. And the thought of such a calamity frightens me very much.

"Perhaps, dear boy, you can lend us the money. It's only $2,000 and I know that since you have done so well, it will not mean very much to you. I feel ashamed that I should have to ask you, but it's so very important that I must swallow my pride. Let me know, John dear, as soon as you possibly can."

Two thousand dollars! As far as John was concerned, his mother might just as well have asked for two million. Still, how could he tell her that? Let her know that he was phoney and that he lied to her all the time? No, that he couldn't do.

He closed his eyes and leaned back. There was but one place in which he could lay his hands on that much money, and that method would be little short of suicide. He thought and he thought. And when he opened his eyes, his mind was made up.

The following day, his mother received $2,000 from her boy. With the money was a short note that told her he was only too happy to do it for her. More than happy, he was proud . . .

Some two months later, the mother received one of those welcome wires from her wonderful son. He would be passing through on the 11:36. Would she please be down at the station in the regular spot so that he could wave to her as usual?

Would she? Say, she was there before 11 just to make certain she wouldn't be late. Exactly on schedule, the train roared through. There was her boy! A hurried shout that couldn't be heard. The excited waving. A flash. He was gone. And the mother walked slowly homeward, a smile upon her face.

Back in the train, the boy spoke to the man beside him.

"It was good of you to let me sit by the window," he said. "I just had to see that woman. Thanks."

"Okay, boy," replied the other man. "You know, you ain't a bad kid. What made you pull such a foolish job on a cash drawer? You knew you'd get caught on the count-up."

The boy smiled.

"Maybe," he murmured. "I just felt like passing through."

The other man drew the boy's handcuffed arm just a little closer and sighed:

THE GLOBE TROTTER

With its unparalleled coverage of news events, no matter when and where they happen, Hearst Metrotone News is able to present in its current issue amazingly thrilling pictures of the burning at sea of the S. S. Georges Philippar, the French deluxe liner in the Gulf of Aden, off the Arabian coast. It was the greatest tragedy of the sea in many years. Ninety persons perished and the pictures which were made from one of the seven ships that went to the assistance of the burning liner, show the rescue of 689 persons from the small boats in the water. Flames are seen leaping from the decks of the palatial ship, which cost $5,000,000 to build, and great columns of smoke float over the sea. Madame Valentin, wife of a French engineer who discovered the fire, paints a vivid picture of the catastrophe from the time it started until she was saved from the shark-infested waters. There is also a graphic description by The Globe Trotter. Hearst Metrotone News is on the screens of the Penn, Fulton and other theaters.

The last pictures taken of the ill-fated Polish-American flier, Stanislaus Hausner, show him taking off in New York on his proposed trip to Warsaw. Weighed down by its tremendous load of fuel, the big ship seems to stagger as it gradually takes the air, but it finally rises and disappears into the haze never, it is feared, to be seen again.

SHARKEY TRAINS

Jack Sharkey literally "tunes up" for his fight with Max Schmeling in his training camp, Orangeburg, N. Y. Jack skips the rope to the tune of a jazz orchestra, then amazes everyone by taking away from the players, first the uke, then a saxophone and playing each in turn with great ability. He beats a swift retreat, however, when the tuba player tenders him his big instrument.

Colorful pictures from the Naval Academy at Annapolis show the graduation exercises of 421 Middies. Secretary Adams presents them with diplomas and they cheer, sing and finally, now full-fledged ensigns, observe the ancient rite of tossing their Middie cap to the four winds.

Nice

Sidney Fox has an important role in "Nice Women," on the Sheridan Square screen today.

SHALLOW CROWNS AND NARROW BRIMS CHARACTERIZE NEW HATS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, June 8.—An early census of the hats Paris is designing right now for mid-summer wear shows a large percentage of tilted sailors. Shallow crowns and narrow brims are in the majority, with both crowns and brims emphasizing a sharp to-the-right tilt.

STRAWS AND fabrics are much in evidence. Straw hats are of the modern variety—extremely light weight in spite of their coarse weaves. Panama hats appear in a dozen new varieties—straw panamas, paper panamas and coarse soft weaves that may be folded and tucked and shirred like fabric.

THE FABRIC hats themselves are of two types—those that are firm and stiff and copy the lines of straw hats, and those that are stitched and floppy, approximating the lines of felt hats. Many of the new models are formal in character, and are made of white or black satin of the extremely glossy variety, trimmed with feathers and jewels.

LITTLE VEILS are often worn with the more severe hats. One tiny white satin sailor from Suzanne Talbot has an abbreviated black veil in lacy texture draped across the front of its brim, hanging just low enough to cover the eyes.

THE COARSE straw hat is typical of Suzanne Talbot's new line — squared crown, narrow brim and sharply outlined trimming. It is in pale bright green, with a bow of straw fixed in place with a jewel.

THE SATIN HAT, also from Talbot, is in black, with a bright yellow feather over the left ear. The entire hat is stitched in black.

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The Woman's City Club, scene of many beautifully appointed affairs this year, has had none more lovely than the luncheon which the president, Mrs. George Scott Baton, gave yesterday for her board of governors. Covers were placed for 20 at two tables, each of which was laid with cluny, and centered with huge white peonies and syringa, most artistically arranged in silver bowls.

The guests included Miss Suzanne Beatty, Mrs. Frank Roessing, Mrs. E. J. Kennedy, Mrs. Biddle Arthurs, Miss Marion Parks, Mrs. James R. Macfarlane, Mrs. Charles Noble, Mrs. E. J. Searles, Miss Marion Jobson, Mrs. Frank T. Hogg, Mrs. Rachel Wade, Mrs. William J. Powell, Mrs. Donald Clark, Mrs. Pauline Merrill, Mrs. Taylor Allderdice, Mrs. Clark Hammond, Mrs. A. S. P. Keister, Miss Adelaide Hunter, Mrs. Norton McCutcheon and Miss Sue Perkins.

Among the appointments which Mrs. Baton has already made for next season are Mrs. Allderdice as chairman of music; Mrs. E. V. Babcock, house committee (Mrs. Babcock's been chairman ever since the club was organized, hasn't she?); Mrs. David I. McCahill, special features; Miss Beatty, library; Mrs. Clark, general activities, and Mrs. Powell, publicity.

Mrs. Robert F. Phillips, of Brownsville road, is entertaining the club choral (of which she is a member) with a picnic luncheon in her garden today.

Seattle Meeting

Pennsylvania will be rather scantily represented this year at the General Federation of Women's Clubs convention which opens in Seattle tomorrow. According to word received here, the state president, Mrs. Richard J. Hamilton, of Ardmore, and the state director, Mrs. John A. Frick, of Allentown, will be the only representatives from this district. Mrs. Ambrose Nevil Diehl, formerly of Pittsburgh, chairman of motion pictures, will probably go from her California home.

Gov. Roland H. Hartley and Mayor John F. Dore will extend the welcome of the state and the city to the visiting clubwomen. An address on Washington and a bicentennial tableau will complete the opening program, a reception following it. Reports are on the books for Friday and among the speakers will be Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, Mrs. Thomas G. Winter and Mrs. John D. Sherman, all past presidents of the Federation. A tree planting late in the afternoon and an evening symposium are other Friday events. A junior symposium is scheduled for Saturday morning. Saturday afternoon will be in charge of the department of fine arts.

"Up to Women"

Mrs. Sherman's department, that of the home, will take over Monday morning and in the afternoon Catherine Oglesby, of the Ladies' Home Journal staff, will speak on "It's Up to the Women." Mrs. John F. Sippel, Federation president, is also on the program that afternoon and a tea will be given in honor of their candidates by the states presenting candidates. State dinners are to be held in the evening and later the Postal Telegraph Company will give a dramatic demonstration of communication methods, placing the women in direct communication with other countries, with ships at sea and finally with a transport airplane in flight.

The nominating committee's report will feature Thursday morning, the election taking place that day and reports on it being announced Friday. Many outstanding speakers will be heard at the various sessions.

Party at Congress

The in-and-out party at the Congress of Clubs (that annual affair at which the staying-in members of the board entertain the outgoing ones) which was held yesterday may not have been precisely a three-ring circus, but it did have an acrobatic performer and a ring master who cracked her whip. And there were appropriate poems, original verses, guessing contests, some remarkable telegrams, lovely gifts for the outgoing members and the usual spirit of fun and good fellowship that always characterizes these affairs.

Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, Congress president, was presented with her life membership pin. Mrs. J. E. White was the "ring master."

The dramatic Club of Court Chartiers, Catholic Daughters of America, will stage "Who Wouldn't Be Crazy?" in the Crafton High School auditorium tomorrow and Friday evenings, with Miss Janet Waldorf directing.

Taking part will be Ruth Burby, Sally Codori, Kathryn Connelly, Helen and Dorothy Driscoll, Marie Debold, Wonnie Gallagher, Frank Belmont, Albert Hartz, Arthur Meyers, Samuel McCartan, Eugene Rainsberger, Louis and James Rettinger and John Roney.

Instead of awarding cash prizes this year the Oakmont Garden Club has taken its award money and purchased materials (among them 1,300 tomato plants) for welfare gardens in the borough. So this afternoon and evening, at the annual flower show in St. Thomas' Parish House, only card awards will be presented to the winning entrants.

The Woman's Club of the City of Pittsburgh closed its fifty-sixth year yesterday with a luncheon at the South Hills Country Club. A talk by Mrs. May T. Neff, h[illegible] guest, who also read an original poem, and music by Mrs. Ha[illegible] Forney, soprano, comprised the program.

At their annual luncheon yesterday in the Garden Tea Room, the revellers honored their oldest members, Mrs. Henry Roser and Mrs. W. J. Jermy, both of whom are 83.

Freedom Benefit

The Freedom Women's Club has planned a program of music and drama as a welfare benefit in the Freedom High School Auditorium Monday evening, June 20. The first half of the entertainment will be devoted to song, including a program of "rose" numbers and the Lisa Lehmann song circle, "In a Parisian Garden."

The second half will include an address by Judge Frank E. Reader, and "Land Ho," a dramatic production by Esther Hill Lamb which the Woman's club will present.

The musical program will bring before the Beaver Valley audience Miss Herman Reader, soprano, of New York City, Judge Reader's daughter, who is a former member of the Metropolitan Opera Company and the German Grand Opera Company; Cass Ward Whitney, Pittsburgh baritone; Frances Gibbons Doherr, contralto, of Freedom, and Neal Mowry, of Vanport. The music is under the direction of Miss Gertrude Mohr, who will play all accompaniments.

BANKERS SEEK TO ARREST DEFLATION

Time Element Important In Fight Against Chaos; Action Belated, Feeble

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, June 8.—The earlier cry of the bankers to let liquidation take its course has ceased to remain practical politics.

The utter recklessness of such an uncharged program at length became patent, and the chief discussion now is concerning technique for arresting deflationary processes.

Mr. Rukeyser

The [illegible] who [illegible] believe that [illegible] the same risks as society itself.

In reflecting the new type of potential fatalism in economic affairs, Owen D. Young, generalissimo of the economic board of strategy in the New York Federal Reserve district, pointed out in his address before the Notre Dame graduating class:

"I do know that I like the spirit of a people which fights every inch of retrogression, whether it be in its culture, in its living standards, in its social and educational work, and even in its hopes for the future, extravagant though they be. We have become too sensitive to human suffering to let this economic movement run its course. Our social conscience will not permit it. Our political organization cannot permit it, and so we have every kind of proposal, wise and unwise, to reverse the trend."

ACTION BELATED

Deliberate interference with the cycle is in the cards, but action comes belatedly and half heartedly.

In giving a literary man's interpretation of hysteria in finance and business, Andre Maurois recently observed:

"Every panic is the result of the lack of the critical sense and of blind imitation of others. Each member of the economic community must learn to think of his part, to understand what is possible and what is impossible. In a time of boom the public was carried too far by its enthusiasm; in a time of deflation it went to the other extreme—moved in both cases by the instinct of imitation. It must learn, in economic lift, to substitute reason for imitation. Socrates did not flee before the god Pan."

TEST FOR POOL

In the final analysis the new bankers' pool is an effort at resumption of security merchandising. The test of its success will be in the extent that it can convert public opinion to a more optimistic view of stocks and bonds at prevailing prices. Like other speculators the incorporated pool will also serve an economic function in holding securities over a period of uncertainty until they become more acceptable to investors after the skies have cleared. The preliminary excitement was due to nimble trading by those who wanted to beat the gun, and profit in anticipation of the concerted buying.

From an economic standpoint the incorporated pool starts to function at a time when the stocks and bonds of solvent corporations are ridiculously undervalued, provided the gross turnover of business is to recover substantially from the present distinctly subnormal volume.

COTTON PRICES FIRM UP

NEW YORK, June 8.—A favorable view of prevailing weather conditions in the South and expectations of an encouraging weekly report from the weather bureau seemed to offset the fairly steady showing of Liverpool, and there may have been some selling influenced by the early action of the stock market and uncertainty as to the outcome of relief legislation pending in Washington. Trade interests were buyers on the decline to 5.06 for July and 5.45 for December, however, while there was considerable covering, and after initial offerings had been absorbed the volume of business tapered off with prices showing rallies of a point or two from the lowest at the end of the first half hour.

The market held fairly steady later in the morning. There was sufficient trade buying and covering to absorb offerings and cause partial recoveries. Offerings increased slightly after the publication of the weekly weather report, but this had evidently been discounted and the market was quiet later in the morning with prices at midday showing net declines of about 3 to 6 points.

OIL PRODUCTION UP IN APRIL

WASHINGTON, June 8.—(AP)—The Bureau of Mines reports production of crude petroleum in the United States during April amounted to 67,717,000 barrels, a daily average of 2,257,000 barrels. This was an increase of 90,000 barrels over the daily average of March but was 7 per cent below April a year ago.

Runs to stills of crude petroleum amounted to 2,371,000 barrels daily compared with 2,209,000 barrels in March and with 2,092,000 barrels a year ago.

The daily average output of motor fuel was 1,120,000 barrels, an increase of 7 per cent over March but 8 per cent below a year ago.

Daily averages indicated that domestic demand for motor fuel totaled 1,008,000 barrels, which was 6 per cent higher than in March but 11 per cent below April, 1932.

Stocks of motor fuel on April 30 totalled 64,037,000 barrels, an increase of 1,117,000 during the month. April stocks represent 56 days supply compared with 60 days supply on hand a month previous.

STEEL OUTPUT FALLS BACK

NEW YORK, June 8.—(AP)—Steel operations have fallen to about 20 per cent of the country's ingot capacity, from 23 per cent last week, as the result of a falling off in bookings, which may be attributed in part to seasonal influences, and also to uncertainty caused by the long drawn out struggle over the tax bill, said Iron Age today.

May production of pig iron and steel ingots established new low records for many years, according to the review. In pig iron the daily average of 25,276 gross tons is the lowest for any month since August, 1897, while the daily steel ingot output of 42,593 gross tons is the poorest record since July, 1921, when 36,713 tons a day was made, and except for that the lowest figure since July, 1908.

Only in structural steel, comments the review, is there any decided improvement, lettings for building construction having totaled 43,200 tons, the largest for any week since last October. Steel requirements of automobile manufacturers, excepting Ford, are definitely smaller, but there is some improvement in tin plate rollings, which now average 50 per cent of capacity, it is stated.

Production for the first five months of 1932 was 714,040 cars and trucks, a decrease of 48 per cent from the same period in 1931.

Forbes

Tax Cost Exceeds That of Coal to Make Power

By B. C. FORBES

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 8.

"We pay more in taxes than the total cost of the coal to make our power."

Mr. Forbes

Does it not suggest that if America's civilization, America's strength, America's vitality are to be saved from the fate of other powers of a former day that were crushed and crashed by excessive taxes, we must boldly face the menace, fight it, repel its further fatal advances?

CONTRAST THE constantly mounting cost of government with this fact, related to me today by another utility executive—who, like the first quoted, was raised in rural parts:

"In the plant where I started it took three pounds of coal to make one kilowatt of electricity. In the same plant we have learned how to make the same amount of current from less then a pound of coal."

UTILITY MEN are proud of having been able, thanks to the exercise of brains by engineers, inventors, chemists, executives, to keep on lowering prices for their products through the years. But they warn that increasingly heavy tax burdens are handicapping them in continuing to supply electricity and gas service at lower and lower cost. Says one leader:

"We now have to hand over to tax gatherers more than one dollar out of every four we make of net earnings. Of course, we first collect the dollar from our customers. The public pays. We hate to be made tax collectors on such a scale."

Isn't that very largely what industry has become, a tax collector for our levies? And aren't the rest of us forced to work too many days and weeks a year for the privilege of being governed, governed by bodies that have tragically failed to match industrial and other business organizations in achieving improved methods, in reducing costs, in satisfying customers?

Behold the masterly, the magnificent, the meticulously scientific tax bill the Federal Senate and House have just perfected and presented to a grateful, admiring nation! Ain't it a beauty!

Yet everybody is glad to have the whole sorry, demoralizing congressional spectacle end, so little have we learned to expect from our fumbling, pettifogging, parochially-minded lawmakers.

OUR UTILITY men are chastened by recent adversity—aren't we all? But they do no despair. They feel that they have a big job ahead of them, especially in electrifying farms, to say nothing of electrifying railroads.

Growth demands capital, particularly since regulatory bodies, the utility people point out, prevented them, just as the railroads were prevented, from laying up adequate reserves during the fat years. They are hopeful, however, that capital will shortly become more readily available.

So may it be—all around!

(Copyright, 1932, by B. C. Forbes.)

Electric Power Output Declines

NEW YORK, June 8.—(AP.)—Electric power output for the week ended June 4 totaled 1,381,452,000 kilowatt hours compared with 1,425,151,000 in the preceding week. Because the Memorial Day holiday came a week earlier last year, the comparison with 1931 has been made on the basis of the past two weeks, and on this output shows a decrease of 12.2 per cent from 1931.

Macy, Woolworth, Steel, Bethlehem, Biscuit Off; Auburn Rallies 2 Points

NEW YORK, June 8.—(AP.)—The securities markets again presented a somewhat wan appearance today.

Stocks gave way more readily than bonds, but neither market showed any disposition to resume last week's recovery. Nevertheless, the reaction from Saturday's highs was still kept fairly well within the bounds of a normal setback.

Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit remained a weak feature in shares, losing about 3 points. Special selling also cropped out in Macy, which dropped 4 to a new low. Woolworth reacted 2, in selling coincident with announcement of retirement of H. T. Parson as president. American Telephone lost as much. Alaska Juneau, bull pool favorite of a few months ago, sagged 1½ to a new low. Miscellaneous issues off a point or so included United States Steel, Bethlehem, American Tobacco "B," North American, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Chesapeake and Ohio, National Biscuit, Corn Products, General Foods and International Harvester. Auburn was a firm spot, rising more than 2 points in short covering on the expected formal announcement of its price reductions.

With steel production reported at the lowest since last December, and some uneasiness manifested in financial quarters over the fate of governmental economy and relief measures, brokers were inclined to the belief that the share market was giving about as good an account of itself as could be expected for the month. It was pointed out, however, that any further substantial slump toward the low average levels recorded before last week's recovery would be a bad technical sign.

The wide open break in the B-M-T shares has been a disturbing influence this week, and has probably accentuated the reaction of the general market from Saturady's top levels. The common stock has reacted under 12, compared to the year's high of 50¼, and the preferred has dropped under 36, from a 1932 top of 78⅜. The only explanation thus far has been the prospect of dividend reductions or omissions in connection with meeting a $13,500,000 note maturity August 1. B-M-T common reflected considerable bullish activity not long ago, accompanied by circulation of rumors regarding transit unification in New York, and a possible fare increase.

Although automobile production was estimated for the United States and Canada at 185,970 cars and trucks for May, an increase of about 20 per cent over April, it is apparent that the quickening of output by the Ford Motor Company has accounted for much of the improvement. Steel buying by the automotive makers has been disappointing. Ford takes care of a substantial part of its own requirement. Auburn's sharp price cuts are expected to accentuate the competitive situation.

WHEAT PRICES AT NEW LOWS

CHICAGO, June 8.—Wheat dropped to fresh bottom price records early today, influenced by reports of continued urgent pressure of Canadian offerings abroad. Favorable weather for spring wheat was also a bearish factor. Opening ½-1¼ lower, wheat afterward held near the initial limits. Corn started unchanged to ¼ off and subsequently sagged further.

On the downward swing of wheat, prices went quickly to about 10 cents under last week's top. Numerous holders were forced out of the market by automatic execution of stop-loss orders, and commission house offerings were heavy. Corn and oats were relatively firm, compared with wheat, corn receipts being scanty. Provisions were neglected.

Reserve Banks' Statement Indicates Deflation Period Passing

Drastic deflation of bank credit as measured by total loans and investments by reporting member banks has apparently been halted. The decline in this total since April 13 has been only $42,000,000, or less than ¼ of 1 per cent as contrasted with an average daily decline of $109,000,000 in the period September 30, 1931, to April 13, 1932. This reversal of deflationary trend in bank credit follows a decided upturn in deposits of member banks which started in late March and which has brought the current level of deposits $331,000,000 above the March 23 total.

Directors of the United Light and Power Company, omitted the quarterly dividend of $1.50 on the $6 cumulative preferred stock due at this time. "While the earnings of the company are still substantially in excess of dividend requirements," said a statement by the company, "the board felt that in view of the continued unsettled financial condition and the absence of any definite change in the downward trend of earnings the best interests of stockholders of the company would be served by conservation of cash and improvements in the company's current position."

Confidence the international oil conference held here recently had paved the way for "positive results" in the future was expressed last night by the Soviet delegation before it sailed for Europe on the liner Leviathan. "In spite of the fact that the comprehensive discussions yielded no definite agreement for the stabilizing of the world petroleum export market, we believe that some progress has been made." Konstantin Riabovol, chairman of the board of the Soviet Oil Export Syndicate, said in a statement. "The conference made a marked advance toward a better understanding among the companies and interests involved. Many complicated questions were analyzed and clarified, and this may open the way for further discussions leading to more positive results."

Patrick H. Joyce, president of the Chicago Great Western Railroad, returned from a month's trip to the Pacific Coast today, reporting improved business prospects in that region because of anticipated bumper crops of practically all fruits. "From present indications," Joyce said, "Montana, the Dakotas and the wheat belt will harvest one of the largest wheat crops in history. Montana, which last year harvested 14,000,000 bushels, will produce about 60,000,000 bushels this year. In the Northwest the prospects for a bumper apple crop are excellent."

The low ebb of speculative interest at the moment was quite clearly indicated by the lack of response marketwise to the news of the Rockefeller shift on prohibition. Recognized widely as the most significant development in the direction of repeal, the announcement created hardly a ripple on the surface. Yet only two weeks ago the market had placed no end of importance on the several beer votes taken in Washington. It was realized, perhaps, that repeal remains a job likely to cover several years. Distilling shares and those of bottling companies enjoyed an early flurry, but quickly settled back to around previous closing levels.

More rain in the spring wheat country northwest was regarded as a basis for promise of a big crop both north and south of the Canadian boundry. Adding to bearish sentiment were authoritive unofficial estimates that on June 1 domestic wheat on farms amounted to 90,100,000 bushels, with 60,000,000 in country mills and elevators. These totals compared with 43,900,000 bushels on farms and 52,800,000 in country mills and elevators a year ago.

Insull Failure Gives Example of Wrong Use Of Investment Funds

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

SAMUEL INSULL has passed from the public utility picture. His resignation from the presidencies of the last of his important companies was announced early this week. This marked more than a personal financial catastrophe. Samuel Insull's introduction to the public utility industry came as private secretary to Thomas Edison. From such a start and with the capabilities of such a man it was natural that he should become one of the major figures in the growth of the power industry.

Under the Insull hand we saw the growth of Commonwealth Edison, Peoples Gas Light and Coke and Middle West Utilities. These were great organizations. They filled an important need in the lives of millions of individuals. They were built upon solid foundations. They were indispensable to customers. They made money.

Now why did Insull with such a background go broke? Why was the astute little Welshman who brought these great organizations into prominence forced out of the picture? It is a story of the perversion of capital, a story of the seduction of wealth.

Insull Indulges in Fight for Control

SAMUEL INSULL built his enterprise on solid foundations. There was a definite demand for gas and electricity to be met. His companies supplied those needs. They did it at a reasonable price. When they needed new capital he raised it by asking his stockholders to subscribe for new shares or by getting investment bankers to market bonds or preferred stock.

Up to this time Samuel Insull was performing great public services. He was giving electricity and gas to the people who wanted it. He was giving good investment mediums to the people who had surplus capital. Now why did Insull go broke?

Desire for Control Was Cause of It All

AS LONG AS Insull was asking investors to contribute their money for the actual development of his enterprises he was in no great danger of trouble. But when Insull began to ask for the use of investors' money for other purposes his troubles began.

The years 1928 and 1929 represented a period in which a great scramble took place for the control of public utility properties. Insull felt that he should retain control of his organizations. He did not have sufficient capital to do this himself. He formed investment companies to buy the stocks of his organizations. He retained control of the common stocks of these investment companies, but asked the public to put up most of the real money. Then he used the stock held by these investment companies as collateral to borrow money to buy more stocks.

The story of what the prolonged bear market did to Insull is well known. It would have been merely sad if Insull alone had gone broke in his effort to keep control of his properties. But thousands of trusting individual investors also lost money. They bought securities on Insull's name. They did not appreciate the fact that they were not contributing to industrial growth, that Insull was merely using their money to keep personal control of some utility companies.

Perhaps future investors will ask whether their funds are being used for real industrial advancement or for the personal uses of individual financiers.

DOLLAR'S RISE CONTINUES

NEW YORK, June 8.—(INS.)—The end of the gold flow from this country loomed today as the dollar continued its abrupt reversal of yesterday with another strong performance.

Strength was concentrated principally against the currencies of France, Holland and Switzerland, the three countries which have been the heaviest takers of the yellow metal from the United States in the last two months.

Banking circles were cheered by the strength in the dollar and some predicted a heavy return flow of gold to this country and a flight to the dollar during the summer. Further weakness in the franc was predicted and this was considered important since France has been the biggest taker of gold from the United States since last fall.

Parsons Resigns From Woolworth's

NEW YORK, June 8.—H. T. Parsons has resigned as president and chairman of the executive committee of F. W. Woolworth, being succeeded by Byron D. Miller, formerly vice president and treasurer. A. L. Cornell has been elected vice president to succeed Mr. Miller, while C. S. Woolworth has been re-elected chairman of the board.

Mr. Parson's retirement was a compulsory step under the company's rules providing retirement at 60. Mr. Parson will be 60 this year.

He will continue as a director.

MOTORS' SALES OFF IN MAY

NEW YORK, June 8.—Total sales to dealers by the General Motors Corporation in May, including Canadian sales and overseas shipments, totaled 66,739 cars and trucks, compared to 78,359 in April and 153,730 in May, 1931. May sales to consumers in the United States were 63,500 against 81,573 in April and 122,717 in May last year. Sales to dealers in the United States during May were 60,270 against 69,029 in April and 136,778 in May, 1931.

For the first five months of 1932 sales amounted to 342,354 units, against 612,529 in the like 1931 period. Sales to consumers in the United States for the first five months were 288,587, comparing with 490,261 a year ago. Sales to dealers in the United States for five months were 295,603, against 525,404 last year.

Utah Copper Plans Month's Shut-Down

SALT LAKE CITY, June 8.—The Utah Copper Company has posted notice at mine and mills that all operations will be suspended from June 15 to July 18. D. D. Moffat, general manager, stated that the company's offices in this city will remain open, but the force will be reduced.

The copper market does not warrant continuous operations and Mr. Moffat believes a policy of intermittent production will be followed until business conditions improve.

Prices Off Fractionally On Light Trading Volume; Lone Star Holds Steady

Small fractional recessions were recorded on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today. Volume of trading continued at the reduced rate noted yesterday and the business was fairly well scattered throughout the list.

The moderately heavy tone noted here was in reflection of the movement in New York where prices sagged under the weight of steady offerings. Adverse dividend news, Washington developments and a further lowering of wheat quotations affecting the trading sentiment.

On the local board Lone Star Gas was down a small fraction as was Westinghouse Electric but there was no noticeable pressure on these or other issues. Independent Brewing preferred sagged a little while D. L. Clark held steady.

SECURITY LOAN TOTAL DOWN

NEW YORK, June 8.—(AP.)—The shrinkage of security loans since borrowings reached their peak in September, 1929, has been nearly six times as large, in dollars, as was the decline during the 1921 depression.

Dow, Jones & Co. points out that these loans had fallen $8,235,000,000 between September 30, 1929, and May 31 of this year, or from $13,205,000,000 to $4,970,000,000, the recent total being 37.6 per cent of the high. A decade ago loans at their lowest ebb totaled $4,196,000,000 or 74.6 per cent of the $5,621,000,000 top attained during the preceding boom.

The decline in borrowings, however, has been less severe than the depreciation in stocks. Shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange were valued at 18 per cent of their bull market highs on May 31—$16,141,000,000 against $89,668,000,000 at the end of August three years ago. The current aggregate of security loans is the smallest since September, 1922, when it was $4,812,000,000.

Douglas Aircraft Sales Show Decline

LOS ANGELES, June 8.—Sales of Douglas Aircraft Company for the first half of its fiscal year ended May 31, totaled $1,260,295, compared to $2,184,456 in the like period a year ago. Unfilled orders amounted to $1,297,322, against $2,486,255 on May 31, 1931. The plant is working near capacity, with 1,100 men on the payroll.

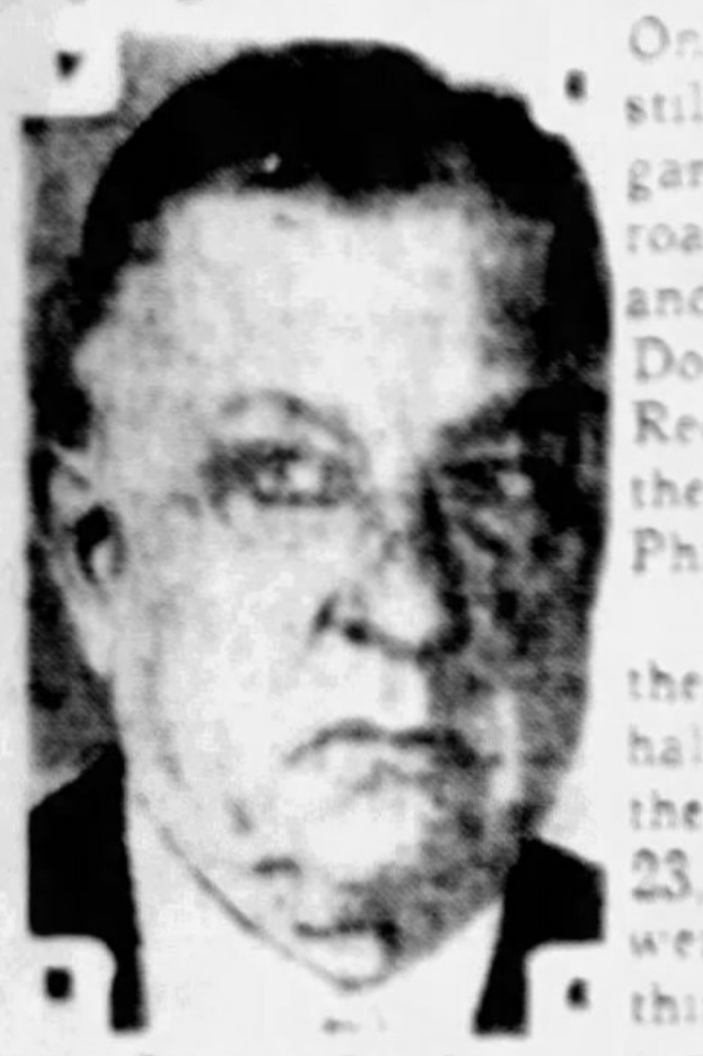
CHANGES COME QUICKLY IN HOT FIGHT

JOHN A. HEYDLER has never seen the clubs of his league jammed together in a tighter pennant race than the one now in progress. Indeed, it is doubtful if any major loop ever knew a closer fight after eight weeks of competition. Yesterday's games caused six of the eight clubs to change positions.



John A. Heydler

Only the Pirates and Cardinals stood still. The Cubs, who have lost three games out of four since they hit the road, were crowded out of first place and the Braves took the lead. The Dodgers shifted from sixth to fifth, the Reds from fifth to sixth, the Giants from the cellar to the seventh hole and the Phillies from seventh to eighth.

Between the first and last clubs there is a difference of only seven and a half games. In the American League the difference is 23½ games. On May 23, or only 16 days ago, the Pirates were in the basement. Today they were third, and their success yesterday in capturing the opening contest of the eastern trip left them only three and a half box scores below first place. It's one of the most remarkable races of all time, and position doesn't mean a thing. As yesterday's developments showed, a day or two may change almost the entire map.

IN ASSUMING THE managership of the New York Giants, Bill Terry became the seventeenth in an illustrious line of pilots. The first was G. W. H. Cammeyer, who led the Mutuals in 1876, the National League's initial season. The Mutuals dropped out after one year, and New York did not rejoin the National League until 1883.

Then Jim Mutrie took charge for nine years, and it was during his reign that the club became known as the Giants on account of the number of big men in the lineup. Then came Pat Powers, John Ward, Jack Doyle, George Davis, H. L. Watkins, Arthur Irwin, Scrappy Joyce, Cap Anson, John B. Day, Fred Hoey, Buck Ewing, Horace Fogel, George Smith and John McGraw.

TERRY MIGHT HAVE made a better impression in climbing into the driver's seat if he had done so with a little more grace than he has shown in repeatedly telling the world about the conditions he laid down before he would consent to take command. The new skipper would have everybody understand that he insisted he was not to be a front for McGraw, and that he must be allowed to run the club according to his own judgment and without any advice or suggestions from the former manager.

All well enough, if Bill feels that way about it, but why broadcast it in a manner to make it sound like a public slap at a man who was entitled to leave a 30-year post with all the honor and respect his plays could show him? It was McGraw who taught Terry all the baseball the latter knows.

OLD TOM SHEEHAN, once a Pirate, was leading the Coast League pitchers in the latest averages with seven victories and no defeats. Among the other former Bucs, Jimmy Zinn had won eight and lost five, Emil Yde two and one, Lou Koupal five and three, and Claude Willoughby two and two. Frank Demaree, .386, was the batting leader, with Lou Finney, brother of Hal, second with .379. Earl Sheely was hitting .327. Ben Sankey, sent to the Missions by the Corsairs, had a mark of only .230 for 55 games.

Kid Gleason

WITH JOHN M'GRAW retiring to the front office, and Wilbert Robinson out of baseball altogether, only one member of the famous old Baltimore Orioles retains a connection with the playing end of the game as a field worker in the major leagues.

The lone survivor is Kid Gleason, still a coach and a member of Connie Mack's board of strategy in the handling of the A's. Apart from McGraw in his executive capacity, the only other old Oriole still connected with the big show in any way is Jack Doyle, scout for the Cubs on the Pacific Coast.

GLEASON IS THE second oldest major league figure still working on the field in the fast set. The only one antedating him is Connie Mack himself, who came up just one year earlier.

The Kid broke in as a pitcher for the Phillies in 1888, when Harry Wright was manager and the father of Geraldine Farrar was playing first base for that club. Gleason, later converted into a second baseman, joined the Orioles in 1894. Mack made his debut as a catcher for the Washington Nationals in 1887.

FOR SOME REASON or other, the American golf plan involving a medal preliminary to a match-play championship tournament does not win favor in England. It was used in the recent tourney for the women's championship of Great Britain, but after one brief trial the Ladies' Golf Union is reported to be planning to abandon it. This despite the fact that it worked out very effectively, eliminating all the dead wood before the real championship competition began and leaving the class of the field to fight it out for the title at match play.

AMERICAN GOLFING AUTHORITIES are asking the British women to reconsider, and at the same time are urging the women's example in giving the medal preliminary a trial be followed by the men in the amateur tournaments. They hold it to be so important as to mean the ultimate salvation of competitive golf in Great Britain.

It is contended that the very harshness of stroke play, its uncompromising way of punishing even one poor shot, is calculated to harden the fiber of amateur players. The match player acquires slipshod habits because he isn't forced to finish out a hole begun badly. He can let it go by default and seek redemption at the next tee. But there can be no let-down in medal play. The player has got to do his best on every shot and his nose is to the grindstone all the time.

FRED FRAME collected $32,000 for his victory in the 500-mile automobile race at Indianapolis. It will be worth $100,000 to him from other sources before the end of the year. Coast friends are urging him to retire with the $132,000 and find a quiet little spot to live peacefully with his family.

Jack (Kid) Berg

But they admit they doubt the success of their efforts. The lure of the game may be too strong for Frame, as it has been for nearly all the others. Only one was able to resist it and quit when he was at the height of his racing fame. That one was Tommy Milton. He never came back to taunt fate.

BOXERS VISITING THE training camp of Max Schmeling are favorably impressed not only by the champion's display of ability, but also by his condition. They are convinced that if he fails to defeat Jack Sharkey and retain his title it will not be due to any lack of fitness. One of Schmeling's strongest boosters is Jack (Kid) Berg. He sees a chance for Max to win by a knockout, so high is the regard he has for the German's punch. "Schmeling is in good shape right now and all he has to do is to stay that way," Berg said after watching the title holder work out. "He surely can punch. His defense is not air-tight, but a knockout punch is a great defense in itself, and Max has that, beyond a doubt. I think he will have Sharkey on Queer Street if he nails him on the chin at any time.

SPENCER TO HURL TODAY

MAC SMITH HAS 71, ARMOUR SCORES 75

SANDWICH, England, June 8.—(AP)—Gene Sarazen, New York professional and American favorite for the title, today scored a 70 for the first round of the British Open golf championship to take the lead with most of the field in.

Sarazen went along easily in the two qualifying rounds for a 73-76 and then got "hot" today to break par by four strokes in one of England's most difficult golf tests.

His score was one stroke better than those of MacDonald Smith, another American favorite, Charles Whitcombe, W. H. Davies and Percy Allis, British professionals.

Sarazen was out in 35, one under par, and home in the same number of strokes, three under perfect figures. His card:

Out ...... 4 4 3 4 3 4 4 5 4—35
In ...... 4 4 5 4 2 4 4 4 4—35—70

ARMOUR CARDS 75

Tommy Armour, defending champion from Detroit, scored a 75, five strokes back of Sarazen, but among the first 20.

Sarazen's finish was as spectacular as if the title itself depended on the first round.

He had only one 5 on his card as he rounded the turn and took the tenth, eleventh and twelfth in his stride. He rolled in a putt from 14 feet at the fourteenth for a birdie two and then played the fifteenth in par.

At the sixteenth he sent his mashie approach to one side of then green and then chipped back too strong. But he sank a 11-foot putt for his par 4. Someone in the gallery said:

"He can't do it in 70 now."

The seventeenth hole is 472 yards and no one had reached it in two shots today. But the stocky little New Yorker sent his drive 300 yards skipping over the fast fairway and then banged a spoon shot past a treacherous headline of sand dunes straight for the hole. It rolled to within 20 feet of the cup. His long putt barely missed, but Gene had a broad smile on his face as he tapped it in for a birdie 4.

SPECTACULAR FINISH

He pushed his tee shot at the long eighteenth to a sand trap and his chances of taking the lead seemed buried in the big pit of loose sand.

Gene went down the steps into the bunker, which completely hid him from sight, and pitched out. His third shot was on the green, 18 feet from the cup.

Carefully he surveyed the ground and then rammed it home for a birdie 4, a 70 and the lead. The gallery gave him a big cheer as he walked off the green.

Smith proved that the month he passed recently in Scotland tackling the most difficult courses of his native heath was time well spent. He went out in 34—only one stroke over the best ever done for the first nine holes at Prince's and came back in 37 to establish himself once again as an outstanding contender for the title he long has sought. His card:

Out ...... 4 4 3 5 3 4 4 4 3—34
In ...... 4 4 5 4 3 3 4 5 5—37—71

Walter Pursey, of Seattle, had a 76, and Robert Sweeney, one of the two American amateurs in the tournament, a 78.

Like Pursey, Smith had difficulty with his putting, due to the fact the greens were freshly cut during the early morning hours.

M'RUVIE FALTERS

Fred Taggart, British veteran, was near the top with 73, while Henry Cotton, Fred Robson, Albert Seymour, Arthur Havers and W. L. Hope, British stalwarts, all were tied at 74.

Eric McRuvie, young Scotch amateur and Walker Cup player, who set a new course record of 69 yesterday over Prince's course, needed 77 strokes today for the same formidable stretch of golfing territory. Abe Mitchell, British veteran, needed a 77 also.

Don Curtis, young Bournemouth professional, who tied McRuvie for a new record of 69 yesterday, needed 74 strokes, which was still well up in the field. George Duncan, British veteran, scored an 80.

A. R. Bradbeer, young Somerset professional, who led the qualifying field with 70-71—141, needed 76 strokes for his first round.

Southpaw Golf Players Plan To Organize

CLEVELAND, June 8.—(AP.)—The boys who dig their divots from the port side may become a bit exclusive.

A meeting will be held at the Shaker Heights Golf Club Monday to organize the National Lefthanders Golf Association and plan for a national southpaw tournament this fall similar to the National open.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: CHRIST'S HOSPITAL IS A SCHOOL—Christ's Hospital in London was founded in 1553 by King Edward VI. of England, as a school for orphans. Its ex-officio governors are the Lord Mayor of London, the Aldermen and 12 Common Councillors. The institution sometimes is referred to as "Blue Coat School," from the curious uniform of its pupils which has survived to this day. Many prominent persons who led England in the field of government, science and literature have been educated at Christ's Hospital. THE MILLION-HEADED FAMILIES OF CHINA—Among the vast multitudes of China there are no more than 400 surnames evolved from the original 100 families of the Bac, the original founders of the Chinese nation. The bearers of the same name consider themselves as the members of a single family (Shin), applying to this conception all the limitations and privileges applicable to a family unit. In particular, it is forbidden for two of the same name to intermarry, and there are other picturesque restrictions to make the lot of the marriage promoter very hard, indeed. China numbers approximately 400,000,000 inhabitants. With the exception of the Wong family, which numbers 4,000,000 members, it is figured that every Chinese family has no less than a million living heads. THE WALKING KITCHEN—The Hindu Shaikla, of Jaipur, had spent most of his life undergoing the fire ordeal, a very meritorious sort of martyrdom for a Hindu Saddhu. The fire ordeal consists of sitting bareheaded in a broiling sun surrounded by five fires, which add to the discomfort of the sitter. Shaikla then demonstrated a variation of the fire ordeal for the benefit of a European. He placed a burning coal brazier on his bare head and held it there until his frugal meal, a sort of Hindu gruel, was cooked and ready to be eaten.

The Allegheny Mountain Association A. A. U. senior women's breast stroke swimming championship will be decided in the Y. M. C. A. pool at Uniontown Friday. A fine field is entered. Receipts will be turned over to the district Olympic Fund.

PETROLLE GETS TITLE BOUT

NEW YORK, June 8.—(AP.)—Tony Canzoneri has agreed to defend his lightweight title against Billy Petrolle in the new Madison Square Garden bowl here July 11, but there still are several details to be arranged before contracts can be signed, Matchmaker Jimmy Johnston said today.

Terms as yet have not been settled, he said, although New York regulations call for purses of 37½ per cent of gate receipts for champions and 12½ for challengers in all title matches.

The title weight of 135 pounds, exceptionally light for Petrolle, has been agreed upon, but nothing has been signed, Johnston said.

ANNOUNCED BY HURLEY

FARGO, N. D., June 8.—(AP.)—Jack Hurley today announced Billy Petrolle, of Duluth, would meet Tony Canzoneri for the lightweight boxing championship in New York either July 11 or July 28.

The Fargo Express and Canzoneri will fight 15 rounds in the Madison Square Garden outdoor arena, Petrolle's manager said, after a long-distance telephone conversation with Jimmy Johnston, Garden matchmaker. The terms were not disclosed.

BOXES GROGAN HERE

CUP JENKINS OPEN

Maxie Flashes SOS for Lost Pilot

Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight champion boxer of the world, was his usual colorful self today upon his arrival in Pittsburgh to meet Larry Johnson, of Chicago, in the main bout of the opening show at Greenlee Field tonight.

His manager, Frank Bachman, failed to meet him at the railroad station, so Maxie proceeded immediately to his hotel headquarters downtown. After pacing the lobby for some minutes, he called up the newspapers and asked them if they knew where he could find his manager.

Usually it's the other way around. In New York, they say Bachman always has runners out looking for Maxie. He has to send him a telegram when he wants to notify him he has a fight booked for him.

Boley May Join Cleveland Indians

CLEVELAND, June 8.—(AP.)—Joe Boley, former Philadelphia shortstop and now a free agent, may yet become a member of the Cleveland Indians. General Manager Billy Evans, of the Cleveland Club, said today he had asked Boley to come to Cleveland for a tryout, and if he shaped up well probably would be signed to bolster up the weak spot in the Cleveland lineup.

The Indians bought Boley from the Athletics during the winter, but the sale was cancelled by Commissioner Landis. Boley was released later by the A's after an injury kept him on the bench at the start of the season.

COLTS CAPTURE DUAL BILL

Cumberland's Colts, defending champions in the Middle Atlantic League, who have been playing hit and miss ball, mostly the latter, this season, pulled themselves together and took both ends of a double bill from Johnstown under the lights last night at Cumberland.

The Colts won the first game, 3 to 0, and then traveled 15 innings to gain a 2-to-1 decision in the second. The second game lasted until almost midnight.

In another dual engagement, Charleston and Clarksburg broke even, the Generals winning the first game, 7 to 4, and then dropping the second, 4 to 0. Lemasters, Charleston mound ace, turned the Generals back with one hit in the second game.

Huntington tagged Beckley with a 7-to-4 defeat.

SCHAAF BEATS GALENTO

NEWARK, N. J., June 8.—(AP.)—Ernie Schaaf, Boston heavyweight contender, gave Tony Galento, of Orange, N. J., a beating in 10 rounds here last night and won Referee Danny Sullivan's decision hands down. Schaaf weighed 212 pounds, Galento 224.

PIRATES BEAT PHILLIES IN OPENER, 7-4

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.—Winning their first brush in the East, the Pirates today are quite convinced they are on their way to some happy terminal. The third-place Pittsburghers made a bold impression on Philadelphians yesterday as they subdued the Phillies, 7-4.

Manager Gibson has decided to use Glenn Spencer on the mound this afternoon in the second game of series instead of Steve Swetonic. Swetonic, with Larry French, went to Philadelphia ahead of the club presumably for the purpose of being ready to face the Quakers, but Gibson will pass up Steve. The star right-hander has been having trouble with his pitching arm. Big Jim Elliott is due to face the fast rising Pirates.

CUBS LOSE LEAD

The first day of intersectional strife in the eastern cities of the senior circuit had a tendency to intensify what was already a remarkable race. The Cubs were hauled out of first place by the Dodgers, the Braves hopping back on the roost, the victory of the Buccos over the Quakers had the effect of pushing the Shottonites into the National League cellar.

Only seven and one-half games separate the pace-setting Braves from the last place Phillies. The oldest fans around these parts scarcely can tell you when the majors last produced such a struggle.

Larry French copped his fourth straight triumph yesterday in the opening clash of the Pirates and Phillies. Larry was given fine support by the Pittsburgh swatters, who piled up no less than 17 safeties as the battle was fought. The youthful Floyd Vaughan, new shortstop of the Pittsburgh team, led Gibson's shock troops with five bingles. Southpaw Snipe Hansen fought it out with the Pittsburgh left-hander. Vaughan ruined the big boy for the afternoon.

BUCS SCORE EARLY

The Buccos were quick to put a productive punch on display. With his brother erased, P. Waner singled and Vaughan also hit for a base. P. Waner went over the plate a moment later when Bartell, in attempting to double Traynor, threw low. The team rode to a deadlock in the same inning. Singles by Mallon and Hurst brought the tally across.

Suhr started the second with a single and he moved up on a wild pitch. Graces' double in the inning gave Gus a passport to the plate. P. Waner opened the third with a single and the fleet Vaughan bunted safely. With Traynor out on a pop, Barbee weighed in with a double to score the older Waner. Vaughan was cut down at the plate when he tried to score on Suhr's fly to G. Davis.

The home team overtook the Buccos in the fifth. Lee's double at the start of the fourth led to a marker, and Mallon worked his way around in the fifth.

PHILS GRAB LEAD

Shotton's club jumped ahead in the sixth by scoring again. Lee's single was the opening shot, the outfielder being driven in by Pitcher Hansen, who came through with a two-out single.

The Waner Act clicked in the seventh and the Pirates moved ahead again. Brother Lloyd singled and Paul walked. Vaughan's single scored the center fielder. Traynor moved both runners ahead on a sacrifice and when Barbee singled, P. Waner scored. Vaughan was nailed again at the plate when he tried to register on Suhr's fly to Lee. Singles by Piet and Grace were big parts of a Pirate tally made in the eighth. With two out, L. Waner doubled to score Piet. Vaughan's double in the ninth led to the final run of the game.

TEAM MATCHES TOP DISTRICT GOLF CARD

WOMEN STARS BATTLE AT GREENSBURG

By TOM BIRKS.

Some important golf activity is on the program for the district today, first half matches in the annual Western Pennsylvania team competition being listed for the Oakmont, South Hills, Fox Chapel and Field Clubs courses and a one-day W. P. W. G. A. tourney scheduled for the Greensburg Country Club.

Four winning teams will emerge from today's eliminations and these will meet later in the season to decide the champion for the year. Play is carded both in morning and afternoon.

At the Field Club, Highland, Fox Chapel and St. Clair will swing into action. Sam Parks, Sr., and Harmar D. Denny will be in charge of play.

Oakmont will be the scene of action for South Hills, Allegheny, Hannastown, Shannopin, Alcoma, Longue Vue, Oakmont and Greensburg will hie to Jock Kennedy's layout at Fox Chapel for their duels.

At South Hills, Stanton Heights, Indiana Country Club and the Field Club will play.

The Caddie Masters' Association will hold a one-day tourney at Edgewood next Monday. Ted Luther, who with Sam Parks, Jr., practically monopolized the limelight in the Open qualifying round at Oakmont Monday, is grooming Johnny Jurido, his caddie master, for this event.

Fred Baroni, professional at the Oakland Beach Golf Club, was a visitor at Oakmont Monday. Freddie passed up the qualifying round. Baroni was lining up the field to compete in the Conneaut Lake open tourney scheduled for Oakland Beach next Monday and Tuesday. And practically the entire field in the qualifying round, with the exception of Horace Brand, will make the trip to Conneaut.

MILE RECORD MAY TOPPLE

CHICAGO, June 8.—(AP.)—A new record for the one-mile run confidently expected, but which failed to materialize in the past three renewals of the N. C. A. A. track and field championships, seems certain for Saturday.

The record of 4:17.6 was set by Ray Conger, of Iowa State, in 1927, and was equaled the next year by Rufus Kiser, of the University of Washington. In spite of better performances by a half dozen or more milers in other meets during the next three years, they failed to approach it in the national games.

This year Henry Brocksmith, Indiana's greyhound, with an indoor record of 4:12.5, and Glen Cunningham, of the University of Kansas, who won the Big Six title with 4:14.3, and came right back with a 1:53.5 half-mile, are entered along with several others who have bettered 4:18. Brocksmith will be favored, but may shift to the two-mile.

George Saling, of Iowa, and Ohio State's crack hurdler, Jack Keller, will renew their feud. Ralph Metcalf, Marquette University Negro, and Don Bennett, of Ohio State, will have an opportunity to decide the sprinting championship of the midwest.

BROOKLYN, June 8.—(AP.)—Waite Hoyt, veteran right-handed pitcher, has been given his unconditional release by the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Hoyt, former ace of the Yankee pitching staff, was signed by Brooklyn last spring after being made a free agent by the Athletics. He won only one game for the Dodgers and was charged with three defeats. His release cut the Brooklyn playing roster to 26 men.

ALL-STAR BILL OF BATTLES TONIGHT

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Maxie Rosenbloom vs. Larry Johnson (non-title), Johnny Datto vs. Ray Miller, Paul Pirrone vs. Henry Goldberg and Jimmy Belmont vs. Billy Holt, 10 rounds each, opening show of new arena, Greenlee Field. (Belmont-Holt bout goes on after main event.)

Benny Leonard vs. Andy Saviola and Jimmy McNamara vs. Paolo Villa, 10 rounds each, Coney Island.

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor

Names, names, names.

If it takes names to make up a big boxing card, the new arena at Greenlee Field has 'em for its opening show in the outdoors tonight.

There are four 10-round bouts as follows:

Maxie Rosenbloom, world light-heavyweight champion ("Sez you!" sez the National Boxing Association), vs. Larry Johnson, Chicago Negro. It's their third meeting, Maxie having won the first on a foul in New York and the second on a decision in Chicago.

Johnny Datto, Cleveland Filipino ('member his three fights with Jackie Rodgers at Motor Square Garden, two of 'em pips and the third a terrible thing?) vs. Ray Miller, of Chicago, a specialist in the art of left-hooking, who's been in there with all of them and holds the only knockout victory ever scored against Jimmy McLarnin.

PIRRONE IN OPENER

Paul Pirrone, Cleveland middleweight belter, who, like Rosenbloom and Datto, is an old story here, vs. Henry Goldberg, of New York, who has boxed Rene De Vos, Gorilla Jones, Harry Ebbetts, Enzo Fiermonte and Joe Zelinsky, among others.

Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, vs. Billy Holt, Homewood Negro.

Rosenbloom and Johnson, of course, will be in the main bout. The Datto-Miller soiree is the semi-final. Pirrone and Goldberg open the bill, and the Belmont-Holt bout, originally cast as the opener, will go on as a special event following the main bout because of the local interest in the affair, this pair being the only homebreds on the program.

The show is scheduled to get under way promptly at 8:30 o'clock, and it is to be hoped that the prima donnas don't all lace on their gloves in the ring and otherwise kill time, as was done when they had four 10-rounders at the Meyers Bowl last Monday night, with the result that it was nigh on to midnight before the Pittsburgh fans got back into their own bailiwick.

CITY'S NEWEST ARENA

Greenlee Field is the city's newest baseball field. It is located in the 2400 block Bedford avenue, and is the home field of the Crawford Stars and the Homestead Grays. Joe Mazer and Jules Beck, of Motor Square Garden, are connected with the enterprise, the former as general manager of boxing and the latter as matchmaker. They will have the Motor Square Garden setup for field seats, with all of the 6,000 grandstand tickets selling at $1, half of them reserved and the other half general admission.

Between Rounds

Something akin to the ultimate in kidding the public was pulled when it was announced at the Meyers Bowl on Monday night that Ted Yarosz, the "uncrowned welterweight champion of the world," would meet Johnny Indrisano, of Boston, there next Monday. Yarosz is the local champion and a leading contender, but he is no such thing as the "uncrowned champion of the world." Let's stick to facts.

With Indrisano coming here and Billy Petrolle meeting Tommy Grogan at Greenlee Field, the fans have two more dishes of big names arranged for next week.

Hickey Park patrons will have to turn out better than they have so far if they want the sport continued at that handy location. The Millvale promoters are watching their income and outgo carefully and will not go deeply into the red.

Paulie Walker, of New York, and Davy Grove, of the North Side, are the headliners at Hickey Park tomorrow night, with Charley Baxter and Jimmy Dean in the semi-final and the two Zivics, Fritzie and Eddie, in the preliminaries. Fritzie boxes young Lewsteller, of McKeesport, and Eddie meets Charley Rosevich, of Johnstown.

Jack Stanley, Philadelphia manager, is a visitor in Pittsburgh en route to Milwaukee, where he has Johnny Hayes matched against King Tut on June 22. He is taking Jackie Willis along for a bout on the same card against Johnny Datto, Eddie Shea or Prince Saunders.

The Twenty-seventh Ward A. C. will stage a Golden Gloves amateur boxing tournament in its outdoor arena on the North side, June 28 and 29. Entries are being received at A. A. U. headquarters.

Herman Pelma, Ambridge lightweight, who recently gave Johnny Jadick, junior welterweight champion, an unexpectedly good fight at Hickey Park, is back in Newark, N. J., his fighting headquarters, training for a bout on Friday night with Irish Bobby Brady at Jersey City.

East Liverpool reports are that Marty McHale really did beat Jimmy Belmont in their bout there last Friday night. The judges both voted for Belmont, while the referee, Red Robinson, awarded the decision to McHale. First reports were that McHale had won and these were corrected in favor of Belmont. The decision, of course, rests in Belmont's favor.

Eddie Shea will be a visitor at tonight's bouts at Greenlee Field. Ray Miller got in on Monday and put in his final training licks here. Tommy Grogan is expected in almost a week ahead of time for his battle with Billy Petrolle at Greenlee Field next Wednesday, and will train at the Pittsburgh Lyceum.

On One Card

Ray Miller

Johnny Datto

Champion Maxie Rosenbloom

Larry Johnson

Henry Goldberg

Five battlers who will engage in 10-round bouts at the new Greenlee Field boxing arena tonight.

With the undisputed possession of the league lead the prize, the Homestead Aces and Carrick Eagles clash at West Field, Homestead, this evening in a West Penn circuit engagement, one of the feature contests of the sandlot card.

Carrick has played four games and won them all, while the Aces have tasted defeat once at the hands of Duquesne Republicans.

North Side City League fans will watch the North Siders and Frank Ferris clash at the Pleasant Valley Playgrounds. Books and Dormont are idle so far as league warfare is concerned, but Dormont will clash with the Pittsburgh Crawfords at Dormont and attempt to avenge an early season defeat.

DORMONT BUSY

Billy Fuchs and George Falconer are eager to win this game Friday. Dormont swings back into league action against the Ferris club. On Saturday, Manager Falconer has re-carded the Canonsburg game. This game was rained out a couple of weeks ago.

Cum Posey has returned to active management of the Homestead Grays, this new development resulting from a merger of the Grays and the Detroit Wolverines, the team which Posey was directing in the East-West League. Posey has retained what he thinks are the best players of the two clubs, and henceforth the Grays will operate as they did for so many years under Posey. He will handle all of the club's business. Bill Dismukes, who managed the playing end of the Detroit Club, will serve in the same capacity with the Grays.

HARRIS, WILLIAMS BACK

The merger returns Vic Harris and Lefty Williams to the Grays. The new arrangement was put into effect yesterday when the Grays played at New Castle. The Grays will continue playing East-West League games, the schedule having been paired down to three games a week, mostly week-end affairs. The Grays will play their Sunday league games in Detroit under the banner of the Detroit club.

The Grays roster now includes Jiles, first base; Allen, second base; Wells, shortstop; Wilson, third base; Harris, leftfield; Bell, centerfield; Taylor, rightfield; Young, catcher; Britt, Joe Williams, Lefty Williams, Hunter, Brown, Salmon, pitchers, and Dismukes, field manager.

GRAYS, CRAWFORDS WIN

Both the Grays and the Crawfords turned in easy triumphs last evening. The Grays invaded New Castle and slugged out a 17-to-3 victory and the Crawfords walloped the Carnegie Legion nine 18 to 3.

In the City League, Dormont downed the Geislers, 5 to 3; Homewood walloped Reliance Life, 16 to 2, and J. L. Thomas tripped the North Siders, 11 to 4.

In the Monon Valley circuit, Charleroi won over North Belle Vernon, 7-3; Fairhope crushed the Belle Vernon Merchants, 21 to 6, and Vesta defeated Fayette City, 5 to 3.

FERRELL BREAKS A'S JINX

CUBS KNOCKED FROM TOP BY DODGERS

Associated Press

It took Wesley Ferrell the better part of two seasons to catch up with the Philadelphia Athletics, but Cleveland's ace could feel today that he had gone a long way toward squaring accounts with the Mackmen.

They licked him five times last season and knocked him out of the box the first time they faced him in the current campaign. That might have convinced a pitcher less obstinate than Ferrell, but it only made him more determined to crack the jinx and he finally turned the trick yesterday.

FERRELL BEATS A'S

Facing the Athletics in their first appearance in the West, he personally pitched and batted them into submission 4 to 3. With the score tied in the seventh he doubled and then scored the winning run on Porter's two-bagger off the screen.

The New York Yankees continued to bowl merrily along as they opened their Western tour with a 9-to-2 decision over Detroit. The Tigers made six errors.

Washington scored four runs off Vic Fraser in the eleventh frame to down the Chicago White Sox, 8 to 5, and the St. Louis Browns gave the West an even break for the day by defeating the unfortunate Boston Red Sox, 6 to 1.

The first day's intersectional warfare in the National League saw first place again change hands and further tightened up one of the hottest races the older circuit has experienced in years.

BRAVES TAKE LEAD

Boston, held idle by rain, took over the top again when the Chicago Cubs dropped their opener at Brooklyn, 9 to 2. Lon Warneke, Chicago's youthful mound sensation, failed to go the full route for the first time in 10 starts.

A brace of home runs by Mel Ott, one with a man on base, were all the Giants needed to nose out Cincinnati, 4 to 3.

Led by Floyd Vaughan, who pounded a double and four singles in five trips, Pittsburgh opened its eastern trip with a 7-to-4 win over the Phillies.

Gar Wood's Record To Be Recognized

NEW YORK, June 8.—(AP)—The American Power Boat Association has decided to recognize Gar Wood's speedboat mark of 111.712 miles per hour as an American record after all and the so-called "battle of the alphabet" seems almost over.

Wood made his record run in Florida under the auspices of the Yachtsmen's Association of America and although the mark was accepted by the International Motor Yachting Union, the A. P. B. A. declined to recognize it as an American standard.

For months the A. P. B. A. and the Y. A. A. have been at odds over questions affecting international motorboat racing. Now the A. P. B. A. has reconsidered, Wood having explained his failure to apply for A. P. B. A. sanction as due to the fact that he had merely forgotten to ask for it.

Six Nations File Olympic Entries

LOS ANGELES, June 8.—(AP)—Six nations filed reports with the tenth Olympiad committee today, outlining the events in which they plan to participate during the cosmopolitan classic here July 30 to August 14.

The countries are Sweden, with 80 athletes and 20 officials and attendants; Finland, with 45 athletes and 15 officials; New Zealand, with approximately 20 competitors; Australia, with a dozen men, four women, and seven officials; South Africa, with 12 men, two women and 11 officials, and the United States. The United States will compete in every event, but the size of the team to be entered was not estimated in the American Olympic committee's report.

Parade to Precede Legion Tourney Fray

A parade through Mt. Lebanon and Dormont will precede the baseball game between the South Hills Post No. 156, American Legion team, of Dormont, and Crafton in the American Legion tournament at the Dormont High School field at 3 p. m. Saturday. Burgess Charles Chamberlain will toss the first ball.

Dormont won its first game in the tournament Monday night, defeating Imperial, 20-2, and turning in a triple play in the ninth inning.

Blues to Play Games at Night

KANSAS CITY, June 8.—(AP)—The Kansas City Blues will play night baseball twice a week here starting in a game with Indianapolis, July 6, President George Muehlebach announced today.

Kansas City is the fourth American Association club to adopt floodlights. The others are Indianapolis, Louisville and Columbus.

BOUT POSTPONED

NEW YORK, June 8.—(AP)—The 10-round bout between Hans Birkie, Oakland, Cal., heavyweight, and Isidore Gastanaga, of Spain, scheduled for last night at the Queensboro Stadium, was postponed until next Tuesday night on account of cold weather.

COLLEGES WIN TAX FIGHT

By JESS CARVER

All or almost all is smooth and serene with the Harrison brow. For a day or two recently the noble forehead of Pitt's director of athletics resembled closely a newly ploughed field as it appeared Congress was going to nail an admission tax on college athletics. But Director Harrison yesterday was informed by Theodore A. Huntley, secretary to Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, that the new Federal revenue bill did not provide for a levy against the colleges.

When the matter was first brought to the attention of the school folk, Director Harrison was delegated to go to Washington and fight the inclusion of an admission tax. Armed with a vast array of figures culled from financial reports of 30 leading schools, Harrison went before the Senate, where Senator Reed was leading the fight to amend the tax bill at that time loaded with a tax on college and high school athletic admissions.

HOUSE COMMITTEE WON

The House Finance Committee was won over to the Reed-Harrison viewpoint and W. Don returned to Pittsburgh and his office in the Stadium with his usually beaming countenance a veritable beacon. Then last week came the report that all was lost, and that the tax was going through. Another bit of heroic work and then came yesterday's cheering report from Senator Reed.

In the same Stadium where he gained fame as a football star, All-America Joe Donchess, one of Pitt's most famous gridiron heroes, gets his degree today in medicine. The former wing star leads a parade of 29 Pitt athletes who will receive their sheepskins at the annual commencement exercises. Besides the 29 to win degrees, nine other Pitt men have completed their varsity careers but have further school work ahead of them.

The Tipoff

Beside Donchess, other footballers who graduate at Pitt today include Eddie Baker, captain of the 1929 eleven; Bill Walinchus, Ernie Lewis, Vladimir Rabic, Ray Anderson, Joe Tommimo, Bob and Hart Morris, Zola Alpert and Ralph Daugherty, all-America center last fall.

The gridders who are through as varsity candidates but still in school are Jess Quatse, Jim MacMurdo, Jim Clark, Rip Collins and Mike Milligan.

Coach Red Carlson loses five basketball stars via the "here is your sheepskin" route today, including Timmy Lawry, Skip Kowallis, Johnny Brown and Al Wrobleski. Ed Alcorn, Harry Wald and Irving [illegible] man go from the tennis squad; Charley Wolfe from golf; Mario Rubbo and Joe Namila from boxing; John Emmert, John Cline, Jack Fierling and Glenn Thiele from track and cross country, and George Schmeller and Jim Patton from the swimming team.

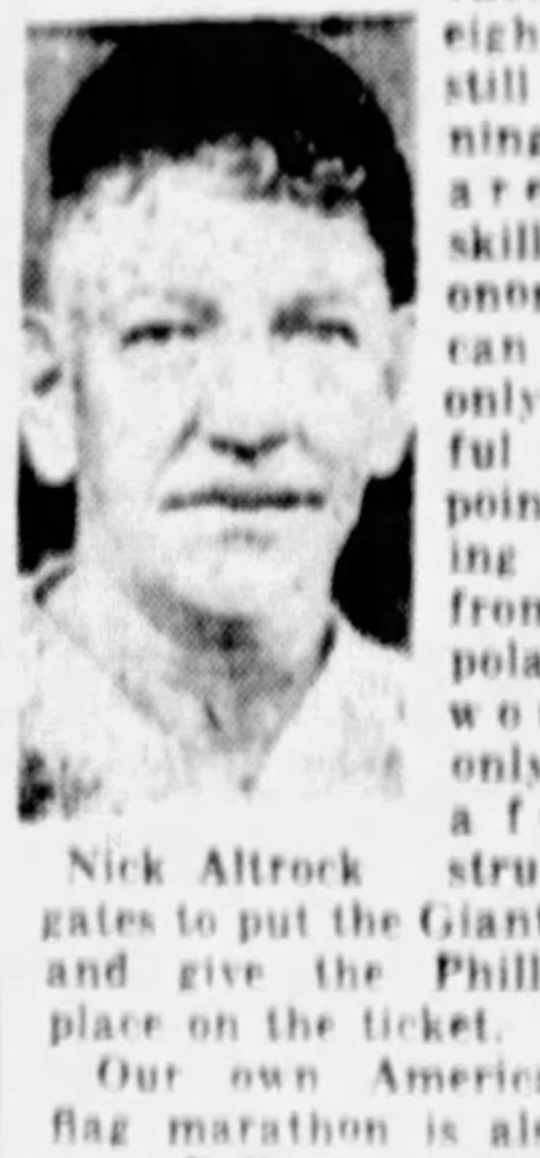
Waynesburg has settled its football coaching problem by appointing Oakley Shaw, of Shelby, O., as assistant coach to Frank Wolf, newly selected faculty manager of athletics. Wolf, head football, basketball and track coach for the past five years, will still be the head man, but most of the actual work will be handled by Shaw. The new assistant starred on the Yellow Jacket line in 1930 and '31, but a knee injury put him on the sidelines early in 1932.

HEAVY ENTRIES MADE

More than 50 entries already have been received at A. A. U. headquarters for the Allegheny Mountain Association senior championship track and field meet to be held in the Pitt Stadium Saturday afternoon of next week. The A. O. H. marathon race and track and field events, including games for parish school children, also are filling well and keen competition is anticipated.

Nick Altrock
Baseball's Humorist
Says:

CHICAGO, June 8.—In all my born days—and they run up in the millions—I never saw anything like that National League race, where all eight teams are still in the running. If you are at all skilled at trigonometry, you can see there's only a thimbleful of decimal points separating the cellar from the cupola. And it would take only a shift of a few uninstructed delegates to put the Giants out front and give the Phillies second place on the ticket.



Nick Altrock

Our own American League flag marathon is also as tight as a Pullman car window, except the Red Sox are down in the sub-basement and still digging for ore.

Lawson Robertson

The Olympic Games

By Lawson Robertson

—Head Coach American Olympic Teams—

When the IC4A train leaves on June 19 with 212 of the best college athletes in the East, it will mark the first invasion of this type to California. For 10 years or more, the California collegians have traveled East, and, with only one exception, they have carried the gonfalon back to the Pacific Coast.

There have been discussions about the change of climate and how much and how little it has affected athletes coming from one coast to another, but apparently the Californians have not been affected, a fact clearly demonstrated in their sweeping victories of the past years. Pessimistically speaking, there is going to be small nourishment for the 212 invaders when they go to Berkeley for the championships to be held on July 1 and 2. The 36 colleges include the East's best from Virginia to Maine, but in visualizing the prospects and considering past performance there are only four events in which the East has any hope of winning. These are the hammer throw, mile and two-mile runs and the running high jumps. The high and low hurdles are an even thing between East and West contenders, but the other nine events are almost foregone conclusions for the natives.

SHOULD RETAIN TITLES

Among the Californians who are looked for to defend their championships are Wyckoff, in the 100; Eastman, in the 880; Barber, in the broad jump; Graber, in the pole vault; Jones, in the discus throw, and Hall, in the shotput. Although Victor Williams, the 440-yard champion, and Eddie Tolan, furlong winner, have been graduated, it would seem these Western vacancies have been supplanted by Eastman of Stanford, and Kiesel, of California. Payne, of Southern California, is the most likely prospect in the low hurdles. The Western javelin throwers—Williamson, of Southern California, and Ray, of Stanford—stand out, but Metcalf, of Dartmouth, may push them and possibly surprise the dopesters.

For the East, the mile runners have it their own way. Hallowell, of Harvard, the present champion; Nordell, of New York University; Crowley, of Manhattan; Mangan, of Cornell, and Coan and McKniff, of Pennsylvania, all are capable of 4:16 or better. The two-milers, including McCluskey, of Fordham; Dean, of Pennsylvania, and Barker, of New York University, all stand out above any western opposition.

HALF OF POINTS TO WEST

So it is with the hammer throwers—McDougal, of Pennsylvania; Finlayson, of Harvard; Hoffman, of Dartmouth, and Converse, of Yale, all of whom have thrown the 16-pound missile 160 feet. Summed up, the three California colleges should score half of the 225 available points, leaving the other half to the 36 eastern schools.

Gob Moves Indoors, Maxie Speeds Up

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., June 8.—(INS)—Jack Sharkey was forced to work indoors today on account of the sudden drop in temperature. The challenger of Max Schmeling considers himself in perfect condition for his bout next week.

Shadow-boxing, rope-skipping and sparring made up his routine, with nine holes of golf for dessert.

KINGSTON, N. Y., June 8.—(INS)—Max Schmeling started to speed up his training course in preparation for his meeting with Jack Sharkey. His manager, Joe Jacobs, said today:

"From now on, we will gradually increase the number of rounds Schmeling will box until we reach 15."

Nurmi to Attend Olympic Games

LOS ANGELES, June 8.—(AP)—Runar Ohls, Finland attache here, said today Paavo Nurmi plans to come to America for the Olympic Games, hoping his suspension by the International Athletic Federation will be lifted in time for him to compete.

If the suspension is lifted, Ohls said, the Finnish distance runner would compete in the 10,000 meters run and the marathon.

A tentative entry list sent to the attache indicates Finland will make a serious bid for honors in the distance races and field events, but will enter no competitors in the shorter races, the pole vault and broad jump.

Claytor, Catcher For Pop Anson, Is Promoted

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 8.—(AP)—An old major league catcher who starred under Andrew C. (Pop) Anson will give the signals for the St. Paul City Sanitation Department for the next two years.

He is Harry I. Clayton. He was named sanitation head yesterday by Herman Wenzel, new chief of the local Department of Public Works.

An admirer of Clayton since he handled such stellar Chicago Cub pitchers as George Long, Roger Denzer, Tom Tullane and Hon Fricken, back in the '90s, Wenzel said he liked the way Clayton got results in everyday life. For eight years, Clayton served under Wenzel as supervisor of a public golf course.

FAVORITES BOW IN NET PLAY

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 8.—(AP)—Ed Lejeck, of Chicago, and Louis Thalheimer, of Dallas, two of the eight seeded players, were eliminated from the national clay courts tennis tournament yesterday as they encountered unexpected opposition.

Gerin Cameron, Tulsa youngster, dropped Thalheimer, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4, in third round play, and Lejeck fell before Arnold Simon, of Louisville, 8-6, 6-4, in a second round engagement.

Thalheimer's defeat in the third round came after he found Fred Andrews, of Birmingham, a hard obstacle to surmount, although he defeated him, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

Lejeck, captain of the University of Illinois tennis team, was eliminated in his initial appearance of the meet. He drew a bye Monday.

The defeat of Jack Mooney, Atlanta, an outstanding Southerner, by 51-year-old F. C. Baggs, of New York, National Veterans' singles champion, was a big disappointment to Mooney's followers.

Still going strong, Baggs came back in the third round to defeat Talbot Murphy, of St. Louis, 6-4, 6-4.

Six of the seeded players came through without much trouble. Wilbur (Junior) Coen, of Kansas City, won a third round match from Doc Barr, of Dallas, 6-4, 6-1. Robert (Lefty) Bryan, of Chattanooga, Tennessee singles champion, won in the third round from Paul Metz, Memphis, 6-2, 7-5.

George Lott, of Chicago, tournament favorite, subdued Bob Stewart, Pensacola, 6-2, 6-0; Berkeley Bell, New York, trounced John Metz, Memphis, 7-5, 6-0, and Bryan Grant, Atlanta, stopped Charley Spencer, Louisville, 6-0, 6-2, in the other third round matches of the seeded players.

Walker, Risko Go Again Set Back

CLEVELAND, June 8.—(AP)—The Mickey Walker-Johnny Risko bout at the Cleveland Stadium has been postponed from June 17 to an indefinite date late in June, Promoter Tommy McGinty announced because Walker injured his hand in training.

A previously scheduled bout was canceled several weeks ago when Walker suffered an attack of boils.

Polo Frays Carded For Week-End

Two polo games are booked for the district for Saturday and Sunday. The Pittsburgh Polo and Riding Club will stage its first intra-club game Saturday at the Squaw Run field, the Whites meeting the Greens. At South Park, the Park team will engage the 107th Field Artillery four.

The games will be repeated Sunday.

COX BEATS PETRONE

INDIANAPOLIS, June 8.—(AP)—Tracy Cox, Indianapolis lightweight, defeated Dominick Petrone, of New York, in the sixth round of a scheduled 10-round boxing contest here last night, the referee stopping the contest when Petrone was no longer able to defend himself.

CASEY ELECTED CAPTAIN

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Frank Casey, driving Homesteader, will lead the Duquesne University tennis team through the campaign of 1933. The freckled Monon Valley youth, a junior in the Bluff college of arts and Number 1 man of the Hill outfit throughout the greater part of the season just ended, succeeds his fellow townsman, Rege Bullion, at the helm of the Red and Blue.

Frank Casey

Casey has completed his third spring of varsity play and, along with Bullion, will keep in tip-top summer trim as mainstay of Sam Keller's crack Duquesne Library entry in the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League.

Casey's election, unanimous, by the way, took place at the close of the annual alumni-varsity tussle on the Duke rectangles, said fracas terminating at 5-2 in favor of the veterans. The tilts were, almost without exception, hotly contested, four of the six singles affairs going to extra sets. Jake Olko, diminutive southpaw captain of 1928, celebrated his final appearance on the courts prior to his ordination to the priesthood at St. Vincent Seminary next Sunday a week by slashing out a 6-3, 5-7, 6-4 triumph over Casey in the initial joust. The summary:

Singles—Olko, Alumni, defeated Casey, Varsity, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4; Sorenson, Alumni, defeated Bullion, Varsity, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2; Bullion, Alumni, defeated Sorenson, Varsity, 10-8, 6-0; Keller, Alumni, defeated Stillwagon, Varsity, 6-1, 6-3; Purcell, Varsity, defeated Cullen, Alumni, 6-1, 1-6, 6-2; Harkins, Varsity, defeated O'Connor, Alumni, 5-7, 6-1, 6-4.

Mrs. Jessop, Coast Star, Clash Today

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.—(AP)—Miss Charlotte Miller, Berkeley (Cal.) net star, today drew Mrs. John B. Jessup, the defending champion, of Wilmington, Del., as her opponent in the opening quarter-finals match in the women's Pennsylvania and Eastern States grass courts tennis championship.

Miss Miller advanced to the quarter-finals, which will be played today, by defeating Coralie Peale, of Cynwyd, Pa., 6-0, 6-3.

The second quarter-final match brings together Eleanor Cottman, of Baltimore, who yesterday won, 6-0, 6-2, over Catherine Kendig, of Philadelphia, and Miss Anne Townsend, who defeated Mrs. John F. Gardiner, Merion, 6-4, 6-1.

Jockeys Receive Threatening Letters

CHICAGO, June 8.—(AP)—Three veteran jockeys, now riding at Washington Park, today reported to track officials that they had received letters threatening them with physical harm if they did not ride according to instructions embodied in the letter.

The jockeys were Jimmy Smith, under contract to E. R. Bradley; R. Jones, first-string jockey for Emil Denemark, of Chicago, and Jimmy McCoy, a free lance. The letters were turned over to the police, who believed they were written by a crank.

Bill Terry Wins Prize In Draw Here

They said Bill Terry was lucky when he stepped into John McGraw's shoes as manager of the New York Giants a few days ago. But you ain't heard nuthin' yet.

It seems that, when the Giants were here to play the Pirates last month, one of the pop venders at Forbes Field asked Bill to buy a chance on a gold prize to help equip his baseball team, the Zink Aces, of Homestead.

"How much?" asked Bill.

"Two bits."

"Okay—never mind the stub."

The stub was turned in. Now the drawing had been made and Bill has won himself a $5 prize, and the pop vender will see that he gets it when the Giants return here on July 5, if they have to hold a parade and flag raising to celebrate the event.

Its seems Bill Terry's luck has come all of a sudden, and that it's still true that them as has gits.

MOVIE LOVERS CONTEST

Follow These Simple Rules —Read the Prize Lists

(1) The Movie Lovers contest will consist of a series of 60 cartoons to appear in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph—one each day for 60 consecutive publication days starting Monday, June 6th. The contestants are to find the correct title for each picture from a list of motion picture titles that will be printed every day scattered among the WANT ADS every day throughout the life of this contest. Mere lists of answers will not be accepted as an entry. The answers must be accompanied by the pictures you think said answers represent. Do not submit any pictures or answers until the entire set of 60 has been printed. Entrants are advised against an elaborate arrangement in submitting entries. Remember, the awards will be made for correctness of identity of the pictures, correct spelling of titles in your entry and neatness. Misspelled titles in your entry will be counted as total errors.

(2) The contest is open to everyone living in Pittsburgh or within 100 miles of Pittsburgh with the exception of employes of the Sun-Telegraph and of WCAE Incorporated or any member of their families.

(3) As explained in the list of prizes herewith printed there are three divisions or classes. It is not necessary to subscribe or send in a subscription to the Sun-Telegraph to compete for one of the Class A prizes. The Class B prizes are open to entrants who send in one six-month subscription for the daily Sun-Telegraph. Class C is open to entrants who send in two six-month subscriptions to the daily Sun-Telegraph.

There will be only one first prize awarded, one second prize, etc. In other words, a contestant submitting the largest and neatest number of correct answers according to the rules, will receive the first prize regardless of what class he or she is in, but the amount to be paid such prize winner will be determined by the class he or she is in. The same rule applies to each of the 148 prizes. In case of tie, contestant so tied will be paid an equal amount of the prize which they are tied—subject to the above classification rule.

(5) It is not necessary to buy a copy of the Sun-Telegraph in order to compete for these prizes, but it is absolutely necessary that each contestant shall have on file in the office of the Sun-Telegraph an enrollment or registration blank, form of which may be clipped or copied from the Sun-Telegraph. Please pay particular attention to this stipulation. In the meantime, if you prefer, tracings of the contest pictures will be accepted and for this purpose you may have free access to the files of the Sun-Telegraph at the Sun-Telegraph office or at the leading public libraries.

(6) The Contest Editor's decision on all matters pertaining to this contest is absolutely final and legally binding and this is an express condition accepted by the entrant in filing the enrollment or registration blank.

(7) The contest will close at midnight Friday, August 5, 1932. All sets of pictures and lists of answers must be delivered to the office of the Sun-Telegraph by mail or by hand before midnight Friday, August 12th. Pretty Girl Ambitious for Successful Career in New Serial Story shade. The offices of the great bank are closed. The other offices are closed also: insurance, wholesale sport clothes, lecture bureau, publishing, investment securities, lawyer, cafeteria, luncheonette, restaurant. Only in the towers are people active in studios and control rooms, imparting news of the world, secular and church music, sermons, jazz, to other people who, slippered, sit at home.

This is on Sunday. But Monday releases some spring animating the routined gestures of men and women. Monday begins the workers' week and the Seacoast Building opens its doors of green bronze set in black marble and invites them within, to struggle, to attain, to fail, to succeed, to love and to hope, to laugh and to weep, to suffer and rejoice, to envy and wound, to hate and to pity. In short, to work for their existence.

In the Grand Central District the subway trains jolted to a screaming stop, the doors opened, the people eddied out on the platform. Men, young men, elderly men, old men. Women, fat and thin, of all ages. Pushing, elbowing, the small stampede began.

Lynn Harding, arriving by the grace of God and 200 pounds of masculine avoirdupois against her back, upon the platform shook herself cautiously to see if she were all there. She was a small girl, beautifully made. She settled the trim belted lines of her tweed coat about her, sank her pointed chin into the collar of kit fox and fled lightly up the stairs and out into the street.

Here there was space in comparison with what she had left behind her. Here was air, cold and clear. Here was sunlight slanting down from tall buildings, but not wholly conquered. Here were hurrying people like herself, and under her feet, asphalt.

She was on her way to work. She was on her way to the Seacoast Building where in the trust department of the Seacoast Bank and Trust Company she was employed to do a job impressively known as "sales research."

AN ATTRACTIVE GIRL

She had held the position for a year, starting in the old offices of the company, moving with them two months previously to the new building. She was paid $1,900 a year; she lived in a business club for girls uptown; she liked her work; she looked forward to a bigger and better job some day; she was 22 years old and pretty enough to arrest the attention of more than one passer-by.

It was early. Lynn was also on her way to breakfast. She had been depressed for months by the cafeteria breakfasts at the club, the girls yawning their way downstairs to the clatter of utensils and thick cups and saucers, serving themselves, selecting cereals with a lackluster eye. So, since the bank had moved into the new building, Lynn had breakfasted in the bigger and sunnier cafeteria in the building.

She liked climbing on the high stool and winding her slim silken legs about it for support; liked the nonchalant, automatically flirtatious attitude of the red-headed young man in the white jacket who always waited on her and was never at a loss for a flung missile of pert conversation between orders. She liked the hurry and confusion viewed with security from her little perch.

At the club, where she had lived since her arrival more than a year ago in New York, she knew most of the girls, but she had no close friends. And there was something about the institutional atmosphere hedged about with rules and regulations, something about the pussyfaced directress, something about the heavy feminine aura of the place against which she rebelled.

A NOISY CLUB

The Marlow Business Club for Girls, heavily endowed by a philanthropic woman who never had lived with 40 other women, who never had obeyed a regulation in her life, accepted, for a weekly sum, business girls of "good character" and "respectacle background," "employed in remunerative positions," from the ages of 18 to 30. Within the narrow brownstone walls the invisible emanations from 40 female personalities clashed and warred and struggled. Frivolous desires, stifling desires; frustrations, disappointments, terrors.

At night Lynn didn't mind. She was usually too tired or too indifferent after a day's work. But to rise refreshed, looking forward, as only youth may, to the unknown astonishments of a new day, and then to come into this intangible atmosphere of caged femininity made her melancholy. Therefore, she elected to breakfast in noise and confusion, surrounded by women, to be sure, but women in whom she was not forced to take a companionable interest, and by healthy, loud-voiced argumentative men.

Today she gave her usual order. Orange juice, buttered toast, coffee—but added, because it was Monday and a splendid blue-and-golden day, a soft-boiled egg.

No cereal. The business club was afflicted with cereals—one hot, two cold. And at night if the hot cereal had not been demolished in the morning, like as not it would appear again in some quaint fried guise.

"Swell," agreed Lynn contentedly.

Somewhere in Lynn's midwestern ancestry there must have been a lithe and laughing Irish girl, a dark-haired, blue-eyed pioneer to new lands, with the soft, breathless voice which such girls possess, the voice with the lilt in it. Such was Lynn's voice and if the western accent about which her companions at the club occasionally fagged her had been superseded by a hint of New Yorkese the lilt remained, and a young man sitting next to her, turning from his own high stool to survey her quite by accident, jogged her elbow and turned her into a startled lady performing sleight of hand with a coffee cup.

"Oh, gosh, I'm sorry," said the young man in contrition. "Did—did I spill it?"

He mopped distractedly with a paper napkin. Lynn laughed and set down the cup.

"No, it didn't upset. It's all right," she told him, her small dark face sparkling from the loosened collar of fur.

"Lord, I'm always doing something clumsy," he bemoaned. He observed her, an open direct glance. He asked a little hesitatingly, "Haven't I seen you before? Aren't you in the Trust Department?"

HAD BEEN INTRODUCED

But of course! She remembered suddenly who he was. She had met him about a week ago. Miss Dennet, her chief, had presented him to her. He was young Shepard—Tom Shepard wasn't it?—the new confidential secretary to Norton, vice president in charge of the Trust Department.

"Miss Dennet introduced us," Lynn helped him out. "I'm Lynn Harding. In the sales research."

Tom Shepard grinned at her. He couldn't, he thought, have looked at her closely that distant morning or he would never have forgotten her, even temporarily. Being a forthright young man, he said so. The white jacket, overhearing, remarked with cheerfulness and envy, "Fast work, brother!" and passed on. Tom Shepard and Lynn looked at each other.

Lynn laughed. "Just what I was thinking," she admitted.

Tom's order arrived—buckwheat cakes and sirup, to be washed down with coffee.

"Been with the outfit long?" he wanted to know.

"About a year," she answered.

"That's too bad!" he told her sincerely.

His eyes were very blue over the rim of the coffee cup. His hair was brown. That it waved slightly was one of his minor burdens. He had a square jaw, a crooked nose, a sensitive, finely modeled mouth, closet-set ears and broad shoulders. He was tall, she remembered. He had also the biggest hands she had ever seen in her life.

Ugly-good-looking, decided Lynn. She liked them—ugly-good-looking.

"You haven't been with us long," she stated rather than inquired. "And what did you mean by 'too bad'?"

LIKES HER POSITION

He waved his fork perilously. "Oh, I don't know," he said. "I'm always sorry when I see a—a girl"—he restrained himself from using the qualifying adjective, not sure, anyway, whether it should be "beautiful" or "charming" or merely "pretty"—"slaving her life away in the toils of a soulless corporation," he ended solemnly.

Lynn laughed again. "I like my slavery," she confessed, and added, "Don't you like yours?"

"Oh, it's all right," he mumbled, and added hastily, "Do you always eat in this dump?"

"Breakfasts," she told him, "and generally lunch. I haven't graduated to the luncheonette or the Gavarin."

The luncheonette was a drug-and-soda, glass-topped-table affair. The Gavarin was an excellent and moderately expensive restaurant.

Shepard nodded. "Me, too," he said, adding facetiously, "But I suppose you'll be lunching in trust-officer elegance some day."

He referred to the private dining rooms for the officers of the bank, which occupied the fifty-third floor.

"I hope so," said Lynn sincerely, to his amazement. She climbed down from the stool, sliding her modest tip under the saucer. "It's late," she said, looking at the immense clock which ticked inexorably upon the wall.

Tom dropped a Croesus-like quarter on the counter and snatched his check. He reached for Lynn's also. "Here, let me," he besought her.

But she shook her head. "I'd rather not."

Rebuffed but not cast down, he walked with her to the cashier's desk, unconsciously squaring his shoulders. Bet he's played football, she thought as they stood at the desk together.

She asked him.

"Scrub. And in my junior year on the team. Yale," he explained and added, his gay young face momentarily shadowed, "I didn't finish."

They made their way out of the cafeteria and up to the third floor where the trust department was situated. In the elevator, pressed close together, he observed her from the corners of his blue eyes.

Small, dark, reaching to his heart. Oh well, perhaps a little more, but let it go at that. Curly dark hair rebelling against the beret of chenille, growing, he saw, in a widow's peak upon her forehead. A smooth olive skin, faintly flushed, and the lovely accent of gray eyes, the color of a quiet rainy day, rimmed with dark lashes shining under the thin fine curve of black brows.

Another accent was her mouth, frankly lipsticked into a charming and impossible scarlet. And near one satiny corner was a tiny jet-black mole.

It's a shame that pretty women have to work, he thought.

Now they were walking into the trust department. Here they would separate, she to go to the big room in the corner of which she had her desk, he to enter the more magnificent surroundings of the trust officers' room and finally his own small anteroom off Norton's private office. He lingered, however. He said:

"Look here, you won't think me fresh or anything—how about lunch?"

"Oh, gosh, I'm sorry," said the young man in contrition.

LYNN IS AMUSED

She was sorry, genuinely. She said so. "I have an engagement."

"Breakfast, then?" asked Tom with an engaging grin.

She laughed, gestured toward her wrist watch and fled into her room. She was still laughing when she reached there five minutes late.

"What the joke at this time of the morning?" inquired the blonde Miss Marple sourly, turning from her files.

The room was flanked with files. It was a strictly utilitarian room. There were no splendid draperies, no massive furniture, no murals, no thick carpet in this room, nor were there any quiet anterooms where tactful men and women interviewed swathed, draped and sometimes weeping widows or bewildered orphans. Yet in this room where Lynn worked were filed the futures of widows and orphans: row upon row of green metal files.

In a corner two girls were checking stock quotations. Miss Marple, at a file, was looking up the estate of one Jonathan Smith. Someone else was filing carbons. Lynn, her outdoor things disposed of, sat down at her own desk by the window on the far side of one wall and looked over the work which was set aside for the day. In her desk lay the not-so-private lives of many unsuspecting men, neatly docketed upon little blue cards.

Here on a card, one David Whitmore's name plainly typed. Here his probable income, his clubs, his family relations, his business connections. Today Lynn would give this card upon which Mr. Whitmore's financial life and prospects were displayed in cold print to an eager young salesman. And that salesman would presently call upon Mr. Whitmore and endeavor to interest him in the many facilities of the Trust Department, so completely at Mr. Whitmore's service.

INVITED TO LUNCH

Lynn jotted down a name on a pad, reached for a copy of Bradstreet and opened the Social Register. Her day had begun.

A little before noon she made her way into the officers' room and to Miss Dennet's desk. Lynn always entered this room and approached this desk with a sense of subdued excitement. The room was enormous, it was pillared. Heavy velvet carpeting lay upon the floor. The flat-topped desks, mahogany, were less businesslike in appearance than Lynn's own. There were perhaps 12 of them in the room, amply spaced. Down the middle of the room ran an equally well-spaced aisle of smaller desks, trade-marked by typewriters: the desks of the secretaries to the trust officers.

The room was subdued. People moved quietly, made little noise. Miss Dennet's secretary, sitting by Miss Dennet's desk, nodded at Lynn, smiled and slipped away. Lynn laid a card on the desk.

"We slipped up on this," she reported guiltily.

Sarah Dennet was 48 and looked 36. She had large, severe features and gentle eyes. She wore a well-cut dress, black, white collar, white cuffs. She smiled at Lynn and her large mouth had curves of unexpected merriment and amiability.

"That can't be helped," she said. "I expected it." She pushed aside some of Lynn's own blue cards, the salesmen's reports firmly clipped to them, and asked, "Nearly lunch time, isn't it?"

Lynn nodded.

"I'll meet you outside," Sarah told her, "and we'll go to the Gavarin."

Lynn smiled and looked past Miss Dennet's desk, the desk of that assistant trust officer in charge of New Business, to the open door of the anteroom leading into the vice president's private office. She saw a pair of broad shoulders and the back of a brown head. She hadn't been quite truthful when she told Tom Shepard that she had not graduated to the Gavarin. She went there perhaps once a week with Miss Dennet.

SPEAK OF HOME

Fifteen minutes later she and her chief were facing each other across a small table in a corner of the rather consciously elegant restaurant. The older woman commented after they had ordered:

"Haven't been to see me in weeks, Lynn. Been busy?"

"Not very. A movie now and then. Except—Ken Wilkins—from home, you know. He was in town last week. He gave me a whirl."

"Is that Amy Wilkins' boy?" asked Sarah, interested.

"The same. He wouldn't thank you for calling him a boy. You should see him in New York. He wrote the place!" laughed Lynn.

"Amy was like that," commented Sarah vaguely, over chicken cutlet, but Lynn, who had been brought up next door to the Wilkins family, understood perfectly.

"What do you hear from your mother?" Sarah asked. "She hasn't written to me in ages."

"Oh, she's all right. A little rheumatism now and then, and trouble getting a cleaning woman. She always has that," Lynn declared, "for no one she gets ever satisfies Father. He howls at the sight of them."

She smiled, thinking of her father's untidy, medicinally odorous office on the first floor of their frame house. She remembered when that house had stood in the country, rather than in the town proper. She remembered hearing the wheels of the rig drive out night after night on errands of mercy. She remembered the first car, which had replaced the rig. She remembered the encroaching growth of the small, energetic town.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Last week's meeting of the Rowland Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club was conducted by William Ewing, chief usher. "Bill," as he is affectionately known to the thousands of boys and girls who are members of this chapter, arranged a corking good show for the youngsters.

The meeting opened with all the children received the club pledge, after which they all sang "America." Each kiddie who had a birthday last week was then called to the stage and introduced to the other members and each of these youngsters was presented with a birthday cake, while everybody in the audience wished them happy birthdays.

ENTERTAIN MEMBERS

Helen Hect then gave a classical dance, which was enjoyed by everybody present. This was followed by Elthea Montgomery, a very clever little miss, who sang and danced her way right into the hearts of the members. June Highboy entertained with an acrobatic tap dance. Following this "Bill" Ewing told the youngsters about the Junior Komic Club picnic, which will be held at Kennywood Park on June 14.

Speaking of this picnic, we want to urge every member of the Sun-Telegraph Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club to attend the regular meetings between now and July 9 because each time that you attend you will receive a free strip of three tickets good for one admission on any of the following amusement devices: the Racer, Kiddieland, the Whip, the Seaplanes, the Caterpillar, Miniature Railroad, Laff-in-the-Dark, Old Mill, Merry-Go-Round, Chair-o-Plane, Tilt-a-Whirl. So, boys and girls, bear in mind that if you attend the regular meetings between now and the date of the picnic you will have a load of fun at Kennywood Park on July 14.

ENRIGHT NEWS

Ann Helfgott, the "official reporter" of the Enright Chapter, reports the following activities among the club members. Beatrice Pitchesky hasn't missed a meeting since she moved to East Liberty from Monongahela City, more than a year ago. Mary Pattinson has attended the meetings regularly for the past three years with the exception of one Saturday when she was out of town. Good work, Mary, keep it up. The members welcomed Shirley and Betty Wieland back into the club after a long absence.

Charles Ross is the youngest member of the Enright Chapter. He's 4 years old and just had his tonsils and adenoids out. Every Saturday he tries to show all the other youngsters the location of his operation.

If you are not a member of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club and you want to join the other youngsters of Pittsburgh at the club picnic which will be held at Kennywood Park July 14, you can register at any of the Warner Theaters where the Junior Komic Club meets Saturday mornings and a membership card and button will be given you.

MASTERPIECES OF MEALS?

Avoid the platitude, you're told,
Whenever you essay to write;
Eschew the hackneyed and the old
The frayed, the faded and the trite.
Seek ever for the new approach
And try the thing before untried;
The banal bromide never broach
And cast the stale cliche aside.
But are they wise who counsel thus?
Alas, for hints so hale and healthy!
A glance reveals an overplus
Of men whom platitudes make wealthy!

THE BONUS, OR A JOB

Millions of Men Uprooted in the War, Taken From Their Places, Their Opportunity, Sent Abroad While Other Americans Were Making War-Time Wages and War-Time Profits, Are Now Without Jobs and in Want. They Took Care of Their Government, Their Government Should Take Care of THEM.

The Sun-Telegraph on behalf of its readers demands for every veteran his bonus, or a job.

It is time for the government of the United States, richest in the world, to stop its shilly-shallying methods concerning American soldiers.

It is not necessary at this late date to dilate on the service rendered to their country by the soldiers. Heaven knows how presidents, governors, editors, politicians and clergymen, have talked enough about it.

What these men did for the United States, the sacrifices that they were forced to make, are well known.

The question now is WHAT IS THE UNITED STATES GOING TO DO FOR THE MEN THAT IT SENT TO EUROPE WITH PROMISES OF NEVER-DYING GRATITUDE?

Thousands of men, formerly in the Army, now out of work and IN ABSOLUTE WANT are marching on Washington to learn whether their government's promises will hold water, and whether the word "GRATITUDE" is to be found only in the dictionary, now that the war is over.

These men do not want anybody's charity, not even that of the government, served by them. They DO want and are entitled to a chance to make a living BY WORK. If the government cannot find work for them to do, they are entitled at least to payment of the bonus, that the government owes them and must pay eventually, and which represents NO CHARITY but recognition of the fact that these men are entitled to payment for lost opportunity, and sacrifices in the war.

THIS NEWSPAPER DEMANDS ON BEHALF OF THE VETERANS THAT THE GOVERNMENT SUPPLY THEM WITH JOBS OR PAY THEM THE BONUS, NOW.

It ought not to be necessary for any veteran to walk or ride on a freight car, hundreds or thousands of miles from home to the Capitol at Washington to get simple justice from the government.

The men ask only a chance to live, and they are entitled to it. Many of them already in Washington have offered to work for one dollar a day, if no better job could be found, but even one dollar a day jobs are not forthcoming.

There has been much talk about "inflation," failure to balance the budget, "danger to the gold standard," lack of confidence in Europe, and Heaven knows what besides, if the soldiers' bonus should be paid.

There was no such talk when this country plunged into a war, started by other nations, and sent into the army the men that now ask for just treatment.

As it is unnecessary to recall the services rendered by the soldiers, so it should be unnecessary to recall the government attitude toward money expenditures when the war was on.

We talk now of "balancing the budget" or "inflation of the dollar," or of "what Europe will think."

We did not bother about those things when we were shipping to Europe, three millions of the men that now demand just treatment.

* * *

Our government spent money at the rate of ten billion dollars a year. We had billions to lend to every country in Europe, we ran the nation into debt by more than TWENTY THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS without a moment's hesitation, in order to help foreign governments with a war, that was not ours, one for which we were not responsible, a war which was in no way a menace to us.

The recent history of this country proves that the United States can spend the money WHEN IT WANTS TO SPEND THE MONEY while veterans of that war in which Uncle Sam poured out his billions so freely, are neglected. If the government refuses to pay to the soldiers the bonus that is due them, that will be BECAUSE THE GOVERNMENT DOES NOT WANT TO PAY.

What a disgrace that men that gave their time, sacrificed their opportunities, risked their lives, should now be sleeping on straw in Washington sheds, eating thin, poorly made cabbage soup, and told repeatedly, in the newspapers, on official authority:

"We are very hard up, we cannot feed you five thousand men much longer. We expect you to get out of here as soon as possible."

We were able to feed three million of the same soldiers in Europe for the benefit of other countries.

We were able to ship three millions of them across the ocean, paying British ship owners gigantic sums for CARRYING OUR MEN TO DEFEND THEM.

We were able to lend ten thousand million dollars to foreign countries to help them in their fighting, billions that WE SHALL NOT GET BACK.

What a disgrace to say that a nation that could afford ten billions for foreigners and forty-five billions for war, cannot now find two billions to save from want the veterans for whom work cannot be found. THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD AND IT MUST PAY THESE MEN THEIR BONUS TO ENABLE THEM TO LIVE, OR FIND JOBS THAT WILL SUPPORT THEM.

What sort of men ARE they, gathered in Washington and warned by this rich government that they must "get out as soon as possible because it is difficult to feed them, and their presence is a menace of some kind of violence?"

Are they not worthy men, do they deserve the misfortunes that have fallen upon them, and compel them against their will to demand at least decent consideration from a government that promised so much?

They are NOT unworthy men that lie on the straw in Washington, and eat that thin cabbage soup, supplied in such niggardly fashion.

Take one, at random, Joseph T. Angelo, from Camden, New Jersey. He wears a whistle around his neck and blows it when he wants others to help him get the straw together and fix up the beds.

When he blows his whistle they come, for they respect him, even though his government seems not to respect him.

Joseph Angelo does not look spic and span, as when he went to the war at his country's request. His clothes are old, and worn, his shoes not in good condition. But you notice two medals on his breast, souvenirs presented to him by a generous government. If you ask how he got them he is not enthusiastic, but he says, smiling:

"They don't get my family any food."

One "medal" that he wears is the DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS. The department records show that he got it, as a private in the army, for rescuing his commanding officer under fire within forty meters of the German machine guns. He has a wife and child, has been three years without work, and if the government doesn't pay his bonus or give him a chance to work, the tax gatherer will soon gather in his home.

A man from New York came to Washington to see if the government really meant it, when it talked about gratitude. He has had no work since last September, his wife and children are "camping with relatives," the home in which he lived has been taken from them, and he says:

"The $800 I would get as a bonus would come in plenty handy."

Another man, from Illinois, graduate of Northwestern University, a certified public accountant, walks around helping to pile up the straw, and do odd jobs about the veterans' camp, wearing shoes with holes in the soles that allow the stockings to touch the ground.

Elmer Jensen, leader of five hundred and fifty-three men from Salt Lake City, says that all his men are out of work, sixty-five per cent are married, one has eight children. The government might tell him:

"In these hard times a man ought not to HAVE eight children."

But it did not hesitate about taking him over to Europe, without asking whether he ought to go or not.

While the proudest and the richest country in the world fixes up its tax bills, votes one billion or two billions to be sent to the banks in order to "relieve them," manages through its gigantic "reconstruction fund," money to be used to reconstruct the mistakes of high financiers, the men that fought in the war sleep out of doors on straw, when it is not raining, crowd into empty, cheerless buildings when it rains, wash themselves in the Potomac River or in barrels, commit no acts of violence, respect the flag that flies above their camp.

They hope that the government that can give a thousand millions to a reconstruction committee to help disabled banks and hundreds of millions to help railroads in difficulties, will decide that it can afford at least to pay the soldiers their bonus, or else give them work.

Not to provide jobs for these soldiers in a gigantic public construction program, or not to pay these soldiers the money to which they are entitled, not to relieve their distress and that of their wives and children, is a BRUTAL DISGRACE and the country should not endure it.

To this subject, this and other newspapers owned by William Randolph Hearst, will return, continuing to discuss it until the matter is settled with justice to the soldiers and honor to the government.
